Officials Fear City Child Abuse Is On Increase

By LYNN ZERSCHLING and DON WALTON

Star Staff Writers
She was 7 months old. She had bruises on her head and face. One eye was swollen shut. The baby's left hand had been badly burned and her tongue was practically severed.

A 4-month-old boy had seven broken ribs — three fresh breaks, three older ones and one of undetermined origin.

Other children's injuries haven't been so severe. A few bruises or perhaps inadequate food, clothing or unsanitary home conditions.

It's not a story about somebody else, someplace else. It happens every month in Lancaster County.

And, authorities fear, the number of child abuse cases is on the increase. Most, like Carol Yoakum of the county welfare office, admit it's hard to know if child abuse is rising in Lincoln. But, she says, she has a "gut feeling" that it is because of an increase in the number of serious cases.

Since figures started being compiled in 1973, there have been 2,335 cases of reported or suspected child abuse in the state, with 744 in Lancaster County alone. From January through May 31, there have been 103 cases reported in Lancaster County, according to Don Moul of the Department of Public Welfare.

Only about one-fifth of the actual number of child abuse and neglect cases are reported, Moul said, if national figures are right.

New Reporting System

A new reporting system will start in July which will give state officials a clearer picture of the problem.

"We've only begun to scratch the surface," he said.

Only about 20% of the cases result in criminal action against the parent or another adult involved, Moul said.

Some of the abuses are severe enough for the Lancaster County attorney's office to file criminal charges.

In the case of the 7-month old baby girl, charges were filed last year against the mother and her boyfriend. Charges were filed against the father of the baby boy.

Another case is pending against a woman who allegedly threw her stepson into a door. He was hospitalized with a broken leg and collarbone and numerous bruises, according to police reports.

It has to be a "very, very serious injury" for misdemeanor or felony assault charges to be filed, according to Diana Bloss, deputy county attorney.

Many times, the filing of a charge is the only way authorities have to control what happens in the home. If the person involved is not a parent, but a boyfriend or other relative, Ms. Bloss said she is more likely to initiate proceedings.

Juvenile court proceedings are aimed at helping the child. If the child is in immediate danger, he can be taken out of the home through a court order and placed in a foster home until a hearing can be held.

"In a lot of cases, we take children away from the parents temporarily. They need counseling," Ms. Bloss said.

In the case of the baby girl whose tongue was almost cut off, the parental rights were terminated, which is more rare.

Prosecution Threatened

Most parents are willing to seek counseling, Ms. Bloss said, because of the threat that they'll be prosecuted if they don't comply.

"A lot of parents just can't understand why we're on their backs," Ms. Bloss explained.

"They say their parents always treated them like that and they turned out okay — so why can't they treat their kids the same way?"

That attitude is common among parents whose treatment of their children breaches the line between discipline and abuse.

Experts say most people who cross that line tended to be abused themselves as children. Those parents tend to be loners and tend to have low self-esteem. Sometimes, authorities say, the child is a scapegoat, a whipping boy, an outlet for a parent's marital, job or personal frustrations.

Sometimes, State Sen. Shirley Marsh said, "A very young parent does not have realistic expectations about what a child can do or will do."

Mrs. Marsh said educational counseling can show the parent what might be normal expectations and acceptable ways to encourage acceptable behavior.

But, research on the causes of child abuse is just beginning to take shape nationally. "There is a great deal we do not know," said Mrs. Marsh, the sponsor of Nebraska's updated child abuse laws.

One of the keys to the success of the Nebraska law is cooperation between the Department of Public Welfare and local law enforcement agencies, she said.

Citizens are urged to report possible cases of abuse, but anyone who makes a maliciously false accusation is subject to a penalty.

However, anyone who has reason to believe there might be child abuse and reports it, is protected.

Positive Results

So far, Mrs. Marsh said she is "very pleased with the positive results" of the state's new law. More people who need it are receiving help.

The 1973 law has been refined twice; Mrs. Marsh said she will await further suggestions before determining whether additional changes may be needed.

Police officers and court officials hope a greater public awareness of the problem will prompt many potential child abusers and those who already have problems to seek help through any number of agencies.

Currently, the city and county governments are taking names of people who want to serve on a task force dealing with the total child abuse problem. The committee, which is yet to be officially sanctioned, will focus not only on the problem, but on recommended treatment for the entire family.

Sen. Marsh emphasized that the law is concerned with providing "supportive services to reinforce the family unit, rather than to separate or divide a family."

Others agree that their goal is to keep the family together, if possible. In the end, it is the child who will either benefit or suffer from that decision.

Ford Pushes Go-Slow Plan

San Juan, Puerto Rico (AP) — President Ford told the leaders of six other industrial powers Sunday that much of the world's future depends on their cooperation and urged them to "shape the future rather than reacting to it."

"The complexity of our nations' economies, individually and collectively, means that we as leaders cannot afford to allow major difficulties to arise and then, by dramatic meetings, attempt to resolve them," Ford said.

Ford's appeal for cooperation came at the opening of a two-day economic summit here of the United States, West Germany, Japan, Britain, Italy, France and Canada.

The President hopes to win agreement from the other industrial powers on a go-slow approach to economic growth in years ahead.

Ford said in his opening statement that the common interests of the seven nations are "far more significant than the differences which arise among us from time to time."

"Much of the world's future depends on our constructive cooperation," he said. Such improved cooperation "can contribute to the well-being of our citizens and to a more secure and prosperous world," he said.

He warned against expecting dramatic results from the Puerto Rican summit, which is a followup to the first world economic summit conference, held in Rambouillet, France, last November.

He said such meetings "are part of an essential and continuing effort by the leaders of key industrialized democracies to address common problems and to improve mutual understanding."

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, who delayed his trip here to deal with the airline pilots' strike at home, arrived about two hours before the opening session and was greeted by Ford.

In late morning, Ford spent an hour meeting on a lawn outside his villa with British Prime Minister James Callaghan.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon and Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey joined the session at about the midway point.

"These were private talks," the White House press secretary, Ron Nease, told reporters, "and I'm not going to be able to tell you what they talked about."

The conference was not announced in advance.

The go-slow approach to economic development is controversial because it means that unemployment will not be brought down as fast as if governments pushed ahead at full speed to stimulate their economies.

Sources said German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt is expected to back the U.S. position, which is based on a fear that efforts toward rapid stimulation of economies would set off a new round of disastrous inflation in industrial nations.

Although most major nations have succeeded in sharply reducing inflation rates, Britain and Italy are considered two major trouble spots where prices continue spiraling upward at double digit levels.

U.S. officials say privately they will bring pressure on the Italian and British delegations here to take new efforts to control inflation, even if it means cutting back on expenditures on domestic programs.

While the leaders of the West's top industrial powers prepared to start their summit, groups seeking independence for Puerto Rico staged demonstrations near the meeting site.

However, they were kept well away from the meeting itself at the plush Dorado Beach Hotel resort 17 miles west of San Juan. There were no reports of violence.

An automobile caravan flying the red flag with a white star that is the symbol of the Marxist-aligned Puerto Rican Socialist Party snaked its way through the city's hotel district with horns blaring Sunday.

President Ford attended church services Sunday morning at the Dorado community church which serves the hotel area. The Rev. Ronald C. Smeenge, who grew up in Grand Rapids, Mich., did not refer to the conference in his sermon but prayed for progress toward solving world problems without "rivalry or arrogance."

Ford met later in the morning at his Dorado villa with San Juan Mayor Carlos Romero.

Mayor Romero told Ford he should not believe what the governor told him Saturday, which was that Puerto Rico would like more autonomy in its relations with the United States.

Other issues on the agenda at the summit included negotiations between rich and poor nations that will take place beginning next month in Paris and an attempt to establish a common position in Western trade with Communist nations.

Democrats Hand Exxon Twin Defeat

Kearney — In a display of independent judgment, Democrats Sunday rejected Gov. J. James Exon's counsel on party leadership positions.

Out went National Committeeman Tom Kelley of Omaha and in stayed National Committeewoman Frances Ohmstede of Guide Rock.

Exon had endorsed Kelley and Mrs. Ohmstede's opponent, Dolores Christensen of Minden.

Allen O'Donnell, a Wayne State College professor and former First Congressional District party chairman, was selected over Kelley on a tight 197 to 189 vote.

Mrs. Ohmstede Wins 214-172

Mrs. Ohmstede won re-election to a second term on a 214 to 172 count.

Re-elected without opposition was State Chairman Dick White of Lincoln, who still maintains Valentine as his legal address. White had also been endorsed by the governor.

Sunday's showcase battles for the national committee slots left the Omaha-dominated Second District without a major party leadership post and represented a victory of sorts for the liberal elements of the party.

Both Mrs. Ohmstede and O'Donnell were considered to be to the left of their opponents.

Dyas Influence Indicated

The state convention results also provided an indication of the influence which former State Chairman Hess Dyas of Lincoln holds among party workers.

Dyas gave the nominating speech for O'Donnell, while his wife, Carol, nominated Mrs. Ohmstede.

But Dyas, who lost last May's senatorial primary bid to Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, said he wanted it clearly understood that he was "for O'Donnell and not against Exon."

Admittedly "somewhat surprised" by the results of the ensuing (secret) balloting, Exon promised to "work together without ill feeling."

Asked if he felt at all rebuffed, the governor acknowledged: "To some extent, yes. It was well known who I supported."

Exon said he is "particularly concerned that the long standing principle of selecting the three top party officials from each of the congressional districts was broken here today."

"I think that's a big mistake," he said.

"It's going to make our work toward unity that much more difficult."

Surveying the results, the governor wryly observed: "I guess nobody can ever accuse Jim Exon of being a dictator in the Democratic Party."

Later, he told the departing convention delegates, "we're all going to get together and we're starting right now."

It Was A Good Fight

Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan, Exon's partner in state government, described the proceedings as "a good fight," but he told delegates that "we (Democrats) are going to survive this test, this struggle."

"The party is probably stronger today than it was yesterday," he suggested.

Kelley had been committeeman for six years, replacing Exon when he resigned to seek the governorship in 1970.

O'Donnell, Dyas suggested, would be "more active and more aggressive" than the Omaha lawyer.

Carol Dyas described Mrs. Ohmstede as "the most active, informed, vocal committeewoman the party has ever had."

Public and private disagreements have soured the relationship between Exon and Mrs. Ohmstede, but the governor was among the first to congratulate her after Sunday's victory.

Later, Mrs. Ohmstede told the delegates that the day's results vindicated her belief that there is "room in the party for all of us."

In other action, delegates selected Diana Schimek of Lincoln as first associate chairman and Larry Doyle of Benkelman as second associate chairman.

Mrs. Schimek defeated Ruth Short of Omaha on a 195 to 182 vote, while Doyle unseated Buster Brown of Palmer on a 202 to 174 count.

Ag Engineering Said Growing Field

By BOB REEVES

Star Staff Writer

For Roger Castenson, engineering means "taking problems and making opportunities out of them."

Castenson, of St. Joseph, Mich., is public relations officer for the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE), meeting this week in Lincoln. Agricultural engineering is a growing field, Castenson said, because of the pressing need for new technology in food production.

If the world doesn't develop that technology, "we'll have a lot of starving people on our hands — even in the U.S.," he said.

Castenson predicts that farm machinery may someday run on hydrogen, or even "ride over the fields magnetically."

Soon coal gasification and oil shale will be producing new fuels for farmers, he said.

Farms themselves will be the source of new fuels. "Knauf" — a plant similar to sugarcane — can be chopped up and burned to fuel power plants. Methane gas can be derived from cow manure.

"I don't think we'll ever run out of energy," Castenson said. "We just have to develop new forms of energy."

Solar energy is being used on some farms for in-bin drying of grain, with better results than conventional methods, he said.

Engineers have even studied the feasibility of returning to horses as a power source. But it would take "acres of food" to maintain those animals — a "very inefficient" process.

Irrigation is another major concern, Castenson said, because so many places on earth are losing water. Engineers are developing an irrigation system which would give each plant exactly the amount of water it needs.

A similar system has been created for barn-fed dairy cattle.

A computer determines the exact food formula for each cow's needs, and metes it out electronically.

One of the most dramatic research efforts is the attempt to increase plants' photosynthetic efficiency (the ability to use sunlight for growth). Doubling the efficiency would double crop yields. But that is still in the dream stage.

Artillery Blasts Jet At Beirut Airport

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — A Boeing 707 passenger jet was blasted by artillery and burned to a black skeleton Sunday during bombardment of Beirut airport. The airport immediately closed indefinitely.

The four-engine Middle East Airlines jet had arrived from Amman with a three-man Lebanese crew but no passengers, the airline said.

It was parked about 300 yards from the main terminal building and about 100 yards from two Saudi air force C130s, one of which landed an hour before the attack in the midst of savage fighting in the Lebanese civil war.

An airline spokesman said the first officer and flight engineer were seriously injured and the pilot missing and believed killed.

A leftist radio broadcast monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said the pilot was "burned to death" It described the injured engineer as an American but did not identify him.

Half a dozen shells fell in and around the airport on the southern edge of Beirut in Moslem-held territory, witnesses said. One shell that an army officer said was from a 155mm howitzer opened a 30-foot gap in the roof of the terminal building.

The terminal was crowded with hundreds of would-be passengers trying to flee the civil war but none was reported injured. One Middle East employee was hit by flying debris and wounded. He was seen being led away for first aid with blood running down his body.

Officials of the airline said no decision had been reached yet on whether or when flights would resume.

Moslem-held Beirut radio announced the airport, which had reopened Thursday under guard of Libyan and Syrian peacekeeping soldiers after closure since June 6, closed again until further notice.

The facility had been shelled at least a dozen times earlier, but this was the first direct hit on the terminal or an airliner.

The airport was open long enough for President Ford's new envoy to Lebanon, Talcott W.

Seelye, 54, to arrive by a regularly scheduled flight Saturday. He succeeds Ambassador Francis E. Meloy, slain on June 15 along with the embassy economic counsellor, Robert O. Waring.

A Syrian air force jet was reportedly burned several months ago after a rocket hit set it afire as it prepared to take Lebanese Premier Rashid Karami to Damascus along with other Moslem leaders.

The latest closure again left Beirut cut off from the outside world, with telegraph and telephone connections down and only a dangerous road trip to Damascus left as a way out of the embattled Lebanese capital.

The Moslem-held radio reported shells came from right-wing Christian cannons. There was no immediate reply from the Christian leadership.

The right-wing Christian Phalange militia, the biggest on the Christian side, warned Friday it would close the airport by "whatever means we judge appropriate" unless a special committee was formed to ensure no arms would be imported for leftists through the airport.

The airport shelling came as fierce battles raged across southeastern Beirut for a sixth straight day despite hopes of a cease-fire raised by Libyan Premier Abdel Salem Jalloud.

Heavy artillery, rockets and machine guns blazed around Palestinian refugee camps and along a two-mile line dividing the capital into hostile Moslem and Christian sectors.

Transatlantic Balloon Pilot Loses Contact

Lakehurst, N.J. (AP) — Karl Thomas, attempting to make the first transatlantic voyage in a helium-filled balloon, lost contact with his ground support on Sunday after encountering an area of thunderstorms.

"It's mysterious. We're really puzzled," said Wally Clayton, a spokesman for Thomas at a communications center set up in a New York City apartment. "The only thing we can think went wrong is the radio."

His technicians asked the Coast Guard to request ships to report any sightings of the 90-foot tall red, white and blue balloon. A full-scale search would be sought if he did not make contact by daylight. "But we think he's still up there," Clayton added.

Thomas said at 3 a.m. Sunday, in one of his last transmissions, that the storms "were not whoppers" and that he had avoided them.

An hour later, he contacted a Pan American airliner which was about 800 miles east of New York City. Thomas told the pilot he thought his position was near Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, but the pilot said the strength of his signal indicated he was much farther south.

Thomas did not mention any weather to the pilot, leading his technicians to believe he had weathered the storms.

More than 16 hours later, the 27-year-old pilot from Troy, Mich., had not been heard from.

Thomas' last estimated position, made Sunday morning, put him 800 miles east of Lakehurst, 500 miles southwest of Newfoundland and 3,000 miles short of his goal — Paris. Widely scattered thunderstorms were reported in the area Sunday night, with westerly 14-knot winds.

Thomas' 24-year-old wife of eight weeks, Michele, was in the communications center following the flight. She refused comment.

Spokesmen said the plan was for Thomas to fly at an altitude of 3,500 feet, well below that of commercial aircraft. At that altitude his backup radio would have a range of only about 50 miles. His primary system — with a 4,000-mile range — failed after experiencing what was believed to be antenna troubles.

A spokesman said an antenna failure would cost Thomas the use of his primary navigational system, forcing him to use a sextant. But navigating with the sextant might be difficult with cloudy skies and the body of the balloon blocking his view of the stars.

Thomas had been having problems with his high frequency radio system even since his "Spirit Of '76" lifted off from the Lakehurst Naval Air Station on Friday night. His technicians at the airbase suspected the antenna may be the problem, although a study of photographs of the takeoff showed nothing wrong, the spokesman said.

Thomas told the airline pilot at 4 a.m. Sunday that he was cutting down his radio broadcasts to one every 15 minutes because of failing batteries. The Federal Aviation Administration said Thomas has a generator on board to replenish the batteries.

Natalie Cole Is Festival Winner

Tokyo (UPI) — American singer Natalie Cole, a recipient of this year's Grammy Award, was declared winner of the 5th Tokyo Music Festival International Contest and won $10,000 in prize money.

Miss Cole sang "Mr. Melody," with words by Chuck Jackson and music by Marvin Yancy.

The Pointer Sisters, a group from the United States, won a $3,333 Gold Prize in the music event.

Recipients of the Silver Prize of $2,000 each were Veronique Sanson of France and Lara Saint Paul of Italy. Daniel Boone of Britain, Tama Tucker of the United States and Michiko Azusa shared the Bronze Prize and received $1,000 each.

Yugoslavs Join Berlin Conclave

Berlin (AP) — Soviet Communist chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito arrived Sunday in East Berlin for the congress of European Communist parties, the East German news agency ADN reported.

Tito's arrival marked the first Yugoslav participation in such a gathering since 1957.

The independent Yugoslav Communists have stayed away from previous meetings on grounds that they were subservient to Soviet domination. But Yugoslavia announced Friday it would attend, having determined that the final document to be adopted by the congress would not infringe on its ideological freedom.

It begins Tuesday and will be attended by 28 Communist and workers' parties of Europe.

The Yugoslav party has followed a political course independent from Moscow for three decades. More recently, the Communist parties of Italy, France and Spain have adopted similar positions.

Belgian Derailment Kills 11

Brussels, Belgium (AP) — Six cars of a special express train carrying Dutch and British holidaymakers from Amsterdam to Paris derailed in southern Belgium Sunday, killing 11 passengers and injuring 29, railway officials said.

Most of the casualties were believed to be Dutch.

The derailment occurred as the 12-car train neared the station at Neuville, between Jurbise and Soignies, about halfway between Brussels and the French border.

The train, which originated in Amsterdam, had stopped in Brussels about a half hour earlier.

Rescuers cut through the mangled cars to pull out the victims. The injured were taken to nearby hospitals and the dead were placed in a chapel at a girls' school in Neuville.

Uninjured passengers were taken to Paris by bus.

Railwaymen narrowly averted a worse tragedy by stopping the speeding Paris-to-Brussels Trans-European Express heading in the opposite direction in the same area.

All traffic on the international line was diverted.

There was no immediate explanation for the cause of the derailment, although an initial investigation ruled out human error.

Officials believed that the unusually intense heat — over 90 degrees Fahrenheit — may have caused a switch to malfunction.

The switch had been checked one hour before the derailment and was found in working order, they said.

Artillery Blasts Jet At Beirut Airport

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — A Boeing 707 passenger jet was blasted by artillery and burned to a black skeleton Sunday during bombardment of Beirut airport. The airport immediately closed indefinitely.

The four-engine Middle East Airlines jet had arrived from Amman with a three-man Lebanese crew but no passengers, the airline said.

It was parked about 300 yards from the main terminal building and about 100 yards from two Saudi air force C130s, one of which landed an hour before the attack in the midst of savage fighting in the Lebanese civil war.

An airline spokesman said the first officer and flight engineer were seriously injured and the pilot missing and believed killed.

A leftist radio broadcast monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said the pilot was "burned to death." It described the injured engineer as an American but did not identify him.

Half a dozen shells fell in and around the airport on the southern edge of Beirut in Moslem-held territory, witnesses said. One shell that an army officer said was from a 155mm howitzer opened a 30-foot gap in the roof of the terminal building.

The terminal was crowded with hundreds of would-be passengers trying to flee the civil war but none was reported injured. One Middle East employee was hit by flying debris and wounded. He was seen being led away for first aid with blood running down his body.

Middle East Airlines, the only carrier serving war-battered Beirut airport, diverted all incoming planes.

Officials of the airline said no decision had been reached yet on whether or when flights would resume.

Moslem-held Beirut radio announced the airport, which had reopened Thursday under guard of Libyan and Syrian peacekeeping soldiers after closure since June 6, closed again until further notice.

The facility had been shelled at least a dozen times earlier, but this was the first direct hit on the terminal or an airliner.

The airport was open long enough for President Ford's new envoy to Lebanon, Talcott W.

Seelye, 54, to arrive by a regularly scheduled flight Saturday. He succeeds Ambassador Francis E. Meloy, slain on June 15 along with the embassy economic counsellor, Robert O. Waring.

A Syrian air force jet was partially burned several months ago after a rocket hit set it afire as it prepared to take Lebanese Premier Rashid Karami to Damascus along with other Moslem leaders.

The latest closure again left Beirut cut off from the outside world, with telegraph and telephone connections down and only a dangerous road trip to Damascus left as a way out of the embattled Lebanese capital.

Transatlantic Balloon Pilot Loses Contact

Lakehurst, N.J. (AP) — Karl Thomas, attempting to make the first transatlantic voyage in a helium-filled balloon, lost contact with his ground support on Sunday after encountering an area of thunderstorms.

"It's mysterious. We're really puzzled," said Wally Clayton, a spokesman for Thomas at a communications center set up in a New York City apartment. "The only thing we can think went wrong is the radio."

His technicians asked the Coast Guard to request ships to report any sightings of the 90-foot tall red, white and blue balloon. A full-scale search would be sought if he did not make contact by daylight. "But we think he's still up there," Clayton added.

Thomas said at 3 a.m. Sunday, in one

Carter: God's Word Law Over Contrary Civil Laws

Plains, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Carter said Sunday that Christians have a responsibility to disobey civil authorities when they feel their government acts contrary to the laws of God.

But Carter, apparently headed for first ballot nomination at the Democratic National Convention next month, said Christians should strive to respect civil authorities and be prepared for the consequences if they disobey them.

Carter, who calls himself a born-again Christian, discussed his Baptist beliefs with reporters during a brief news conference after attending a men's Sunday school class at Plains Baptist Church.

The former Georgia governor, who is a Baptist deacon, attended regular church services later and then returned to his tree-shaded home on the outskirts of this small, southwest Georgia community.

He now has 1,539 delegates according to an Associated Press delegate poll, more than the 1,505 needed to secure nomination when the Democratic National Convention opens.

The news conference came when one reporter asked Carter's reaction to the Sunday school lesson that Christians should respect and obey civil authorities because they were instituted by God.

"The lesson this morning taught very clearly that a Christian's duty . . . is to obey the civil authorities," Carter responded, adding that a distinction should be drawn "when a public servant . . . disobeys the word of God."

"At that point, it's the responsibility of a Christian to ask whether his government accurately reflects the will of God . . . and if the judgment is that it doesn't obey the will of God, then the duty of a Christian is to obey the will of God," he said.

Asked what civil authorities should do when a person declares he cannot obey a law because of his religious beliefs, Carter replied, "The Bible teaches in that case that the citizen has to suffer the consequences of the law."

Carter said he has studied the teachings of theologian Reinhold Niebuhr for 15 to 20 years and that Niebuhr was able to resolve for himself, and for Carter, the question of conflicts between civil authority and God's word.

"We are supposed to have a responsibility as citizens to make sure that the law, the government, the public authorities do provide for honesty, for fairness, for compassion, for concern, for equality of opportunity, for love," Carter said.

"So we have a responsibility to try to shape the government so that it does exemplify the teachings of God; to obey the government and—if at times the government, because of an inadequate influence of ourselves, violates, in our opinion, the rule of God—that we're supposed to accept the punishment administered to us by the state," he said.

CARTER . . . plants kiss on 6-month-old Bill Callis.

N.Y. Times Summary

FBI Sanctioned Burglaries

Washington — The Federal Bureau of Investigation recommended incentive awards and commendations for six agents in its New York office who carried out burglaries of the Socialist Workers Party's Manhattan offices in 1964 and 1965, according to bureau documents made public Sunday. The documents, obtained by the SWP through its lawsuit against the government, praise the six agents for their handling of "situations demanding constant alertness, swift reaction, sound judgment and great discretion." Although the amount of the awards is unclear, FBI sources have said that they usually amounted to several hundred dollars.

Job Plans Re-Examined

Washington — Prodded by Congress, the U.S. Employment Service is making a searching re-examination of how it can best help employers fill vacant jobs and help the unemployed find jobs they can hold.

Mayors Notify Ford

Milwaukee — Republican mayors sent word to President Ford Sunday that it would be to his political advantage not to veto the $4-billion public works act sent to him by Congress last week.

Seattle Faring Well

Seattle — Seattle has long been the shopkeeper and warehouse for Alaska, and the Alaska pipeline is proving a boon to a city hard-hit by the Boeing-aerospace recession.

Tire Dealers Still Okay

Jersey City — Regardless of the prolonged strike in the tire industry, tire dealers seem to be faring well. Sales are brisk and stocks are still not depleted.

Reagan Trims Ford's Lead To A Slim 25 Delegates

By The Associated Press

Ronald Reagan cut President Ford's lead to a slim 25 delegates over the weekend as the race for the Republican presidential nomination headed for a convention showdown with 182 uncommitted delegates holding the key.

The tally as of Sunday stood at 1,001 delegates for Ford and 976 for Reagan, according to an Associated Press delegate poll. With only 98 delegates left to be chosen and 1,130 needed for the nomination, the outcome apparently rests with the 182 still undecided delegates.

Ford went into the weekend 56 delegates ahead of Reagan, 984 for the President to 928 for Reagan. But at GOP conventions in four states, Reagan picked up 46 delegates to 17 for Ford. In addition, two previously uncommitted Wyoming delegates switched to Reagan.

"I believe on the basis of what has taken place so far, and our own projections, that I will go to Kansas City with enough votes to win on the first ballot," Reagan said.

There was no immediate comment from the Ford campaign organization. The President was in Puerto Rico for the economic summit and had no public comment on the delegate selection.

The weekend began on a strong note for the President as his well organized forces held firm to win 17 of the 18 delegates chosen early Saturday morning at a Republican state convention in Minnesota.

Reagan had hoped to pick up six of the Minnesota delegates, but the Ford people were willing to give him only one after pushing through a rules change guaranteeing them control of the delegate selection.

Nixon Secretary Kept $100,000 In Office Safe

Washington (UPI) — Watergate prosecutors have learned that President Richard Nixon's secretary, Rosemary Woods, kept a $100,000 contribution from a Minnesota millionaire in her White House safe until six months after the 1972 election, The Washington Post reported Sunday.

The money was returned only after the Internal Revenue Service started an investigation into another $100,000 donated by multimillionaire Howard Hughes that was kept in a safe deposit box by longtime Nixon friend Bebe Rebozo, the newspaper said.

In a reprise of still unanswered questions about the Watergate affair, Post reporter Bob Woodward also reported the prosecutors learned that Saudi Arabian businessman Adnan Khashoggi, a central figure in investigations of foreign payoffs by American companies, kept an account in Rebozo's Florida bank.

Woodward said investigators were unable to trace two $100,000 withdrawals from the account.

Secretary Elected

AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION MAINTENANCE

It is a recognized fact that in many instances, clutch failure in automatic transmission is due to products of fluid oxidation being deposited in the clutch plates causing slippage. Chevrolet Motor Division recommends that every 24,000 miles or 2 years service, under normal conditions the automatic transmission should have the following services:

- Remove, clean & replace automatic pan.
- Remove, clean & replace suction screen.
- Check vacuum modulator valve, replace if needed.
- Adjust low band, add new fluid as needed (parts extra as required)

Plains, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Carter said Sunday that Christians have a responsibility to disobey civil authorities when they feel their government acts contrary to the laws of God.

But Carter, apparently headed for first ballot nomination at the Democratic National Convention next month, said Christians should strive to respect civil authorities and be prepared for the consequences if they disobey them.

Carter, who calls himself a born-again Christian, discussed his Baptist beliefs with reporters during a brief news conference after attending a men's Sunday school class at Plains Baptist Church.

The former Georgia governor, who is a Baptist deacon, attended regular church services later and then returned to his tree-shaded home on the outskirts of this small, southwest Georgia community.

He now has 1,539 delegates according to an Associated Press delegate poll, more than the 1,505 needed to secure nomination when the Democratic National Convention opens.

The news conference came when one reporter asked Carter's reaction to the Sunday school lesson that Christians should respect and obey civil authorities because they were instructed by God.

"The lesson this morning taught very clearly that a Christian's duty . . . is to obey the civil authorities," Carter responded, adding that a distinction should be drawn "when a public servant . . . disobeys the word of God."

"At that point, it's the responsibility of a Christian to ask whether his government accurately reflects the will of God . . . and if the judgment is that it doesn't obey the will of God, then the duty of a Christian is to obey the will of God," he said.

Asked what civil authorities should do when a person declares he cannot obey a law because of his religious beliefs, Carter replied, "The Bible teaches in that case that the citizen has to suffer the consequences of the law."

Carter said he has studied the teachings of theologian Reinhold Niebuhr for 15 to 20 years and that Niebuhr was able to resolve for himself, and for Carter, the question of conflicts between civil authority and God's word.

"We are supposed to have a responsibility as citizens to make sure that the law, the government, the public authorities do provide for honesty, for fairness, for compassion, for concern, for equality of opportunity, for love," Carter said.

"So we have a responsibility to try to shape the government so that it does exemplify the teachings of God; to obey the government and — if at times the government, because of an inadequate influence of ourselves, violates, in our opinion, the rule of God — that we're supposed to accept the punishment administered to us by the state," he said.

N.Y. Times Summary

FBI Sanctioned Burglaries

Washington — The Federal Bureau of Investigation recommended incentive awards and commendations for six agents in its New York office who carried out burglaries of the Socialist Workers Party's Manhattan offices in 1964 and 1965, according to bureau documents made public Sunday. The documents, obtained by the SWP through its lawsuit against the government, praise the six agents for their handling of "situations demanding constant alertness, swift reaction, sound judgment and great discretion." Although the amount of the awards is unclear, FBI sources have said that they usually amounted to several hundred dollars.

Job Plans Re-Examined

Washington — Prodded by Congress, the U.S. Employment Service is making a searching re-examination of how it can best help employers fill vacant jobs and help the unemployed find jobs they can hold.

Mayors Notify Ford

Milwaukee — Republican mayors sent word to President Ford Sunday that it would be to his political advantage not to veto the $4-billion public works act sent to him by Congress last week.

Seattle Faring Well

Seattle — Seattle has long been the shopkeeper and warehouse for Alaska, and the Alaska pipeline is proving a boon to a city hard-hit by the Boeing-aerospace recession.

Tire Dealers Still Okay

Jersey City — Regardless of the prolonged strike in the tire industry, tire dealers seem to be faring well. Sales are brisk and stocks are still not depleted.

Reagan Trims Ford's Lead To A Slim 25 Delegates

By The Associated Press

Ronald Reagan cut President Ford's lead to a slim 25 delegates over the weekend as the race for the Republican presidential nomination headed for a convention showdown with 182 uncommitted delegates holding the key.

The tally as of Sunday stood at 1,001 delegates for Ford and 978 for Reagan, according to an Associated Press delegate poll. With only 98 delegates left to be chosen and 1,130 needed for the nomination, the outcome apparently rests with the 182 still undecided delegates.

Ford went into the weekend 56 delegates ahead of Reagan, 984 for the President to 928 for Reagan. But at GOP conventions in four states, Reagan picked up 46 delegates to 17 for Ford. In addition, two previously uncommitted Wyoming delegates switched to Reagan.

"I believe on the basis of what has taken place so far, and our own projections, that I will go to Kansas City with enough votes to win on the first ballot," Reagan said.

There was no immediate comment from the Ford campaign organization. The President was in Puerto Rico for the economic summit and had no public comment on the delegate selection.

The weekend began on a strong note for the President as his well organized forces held firm to win 17 of the 18 delegates chosen early Saturday morning at a Republican state convention in Minnesota.

Reagan had hoped to pick up six of the Minnesota delegates, but the Ford people were willing to give him only one after pushing through a rules change guaranteeing them control of the delegate selection.

Nixon Secretary Kept $100,000 In Office Safe

Washington (UPI) — Watergate prosecutors have learned that President Richard Nixon's secretary, Rosemary Woods, kept a $100,000 contribution from a Minnesota millionaire in her White House safe until six months after the 1972 election. The Washington Post reported Sunday.

The money was returned only after the Internal Revenue Service started an investigation into another $100,000 donated by multimillionaire Howard Hughes that was kept in a safe deposit box by longtime Nixon friend Bebe Rebozo, the newspaper said.

In a reprise of still unanswered questions about the Watergate affair, Post reporter Bob Woodward also reported the prosecutors learned that Saudi Arabian businessman Adnan Khashoggi, a central figure in investigations of foreign payoffs by American companies, kept an account in Rebozo's Florida bank.

Woodward said investigators were unable to trace two $100,000 withdrawals from the account.

Secretary Elected

Des Moines (UPI) — Iowa Secretary of Agriculture Robert H. Lounsberry has been elected

It was fit for fat from then on. Reagan forces were firmly in control at state conventions Saturday in Montana, New Mexico and Idaho and refused to give Ford's backers even a single delegate.

The former California governor swept all 20 delegates chosen in Montana, all 21 selected in New Mexico and four elected in Idaho.

In doing so, Reagan forces in New Mexico denied delegate slots to U.S. Treasurer Francine Neff and Sen. Pete Domenici, both Ford backers.

In Montana, Ford's supporters said the party would be torn apart unless he received seven delegates to reflect his 35 percent showing in a GOP primary. That was the same argument made by Reagan backers in Minnesota. It was rejected by the Ford camp in Minnesota, and Reagan forces in Montana turned a deaf ear when it was raised there.

On the Democratic side, Jimmy Carter added further to his apparently insurmountable lead for the nomination. Carter already had more than the 1,505 delegates needed for the nomination when North Dakota Democrats gave him 11 of their 13 delegates Saturday and Colorado added four more.

There are now 1,539 delegates in the Carter column, according to the AP delegate poll.

The 98 Republican delegates still to be chosen are in North Dakota, Colorado, Connecticut and Utah. Ford campaigners in those states see them splitting 63 for the President and 35 for Reagan. Even that projection leaves the President with 1,064 delegates, 66 short of the nomination.

Reagan's backers in the four states see him taking 54 of the remaining delegates to 44 for Ford. Again, even that projection by his own people leaves Reagan with 1,030 delegates, 100 short of what he will need in August to take the nomination at the Republican National Convention in Kansas City.

Campaigner For Carter Is Popular

Omaha (AP) — Jimmy Carter's Nebraska campaign manager said she has become increasingly popular since her candidate locked up the Democratic presidential nomination.

Mrs. Joan Masuck said, "People who wouldn't give $10 to the Carter campaign earlier this year are calling to ask how they can help."

She said they also are calling to provide Carter with ideas and even to apply for jobs in what they believe will be the beginning next year of a four-or-eight-year Carter administration.

Mrs. Masuck said she is the funnel for ideas and job applications.

Response To Health Threat

President Ford's plan to immunize the nation's entire population against swine flu this year seems to be meeting with less than uniform enthusiasm.

For all the gratitude and cooperation he is getting, the President should drop the idea and hope that all Democrats and Reagan supporters fall victim to the anticipated epidemic. He might be moved to drop it, too, except the Congress has already gone along with the idea and appropriated the money.

Last week committees advising the U.S. Public Health Services said that after considering results of the first human tests with swine flu vaccine they see no reason to change plans to immunize the entire adult population. The new vaccines appear safe and effective so far as adults are concerned. But the committees said more research is needed before they can recommend vaccinating children and young adults. Apparently the vaccines which yield the best results in immunizing against swine flu also cause the most severe side effects among children and young adults.

The experts are confident, however, that a safe and effective vaccine can be found for children, although the immunization program for children will probably have to begin later than the fall start for adult immunization. That only makes sense; a safe vaccine must be found for all segments of the population — especially those in the high-risk category.

It isn't difficult in finding safe and effective vaccines for everybody which prompts a look at the immunization program, however.

It is the resistance — some justified to some extent and some not — with which the proposal has been met from the outset.

Ford had no sooner suggested a mass immunization program than some in the medical profession said that it wasn't needed because there was little evidence to support the fear of a nationwide epidemic. Some public health officials and some outside the medical field charged the President with playing election year politics by coming up with a grandstand play in a vital field; health, after all, is on everybody's mind. Some drug companies and some physicians want immunity from lawsuit in case of adverse reactions to the vaccine. And some physicians have suggested that they really don't have the time to administer the vaccine.

Perhaps swine flu was not the proper disease to test the nation's capacity for mass response to a health threat.

But it makes one wonder whether a safe and effective vaccine for cancer, for example, could ever be efficiently and quickly delivered once produced.

Policy To Be Violated Again?

The Lincoln City Council's policy relating to the maximum number of licensed alcoholic beverage establishments it wants operating in the city is in jeopardy again.

The State Liquor Control Commission last week heard and took under advisement an application by two local businessmen for a new liquor license. A decision is expected any time. If the license is granted by the commission, it would boost the number of liquor licenses in Lincoln to 138, three over the council's ceiling of 135. The liquor commission is the final authority on new license applications, the council's policy is advisory only, but the commission tends to follow local policy if it makes sense. That the Lincoln numbers ceiling has been violated by the commission twice already this year is some sort of testimony as to the sense of the policy.

At the hearing last week, the city called on one of its strongest allies in the matter, the Lancaster County Beverage Association, to testify in support of the license limit, which of course benefits the association's membership. A spokesman for the association said there is no need to increase the number of licensed premises since demand has been met by creating almost 5,300 new seats in existing establishments since 1970. The spokesman would have done well to forecast how many additional seats will be crammed into existing bars and restaurants with lounges as the city's population reaches 200,000 and beyond. That would be more to the point.

Clearly, the city at some point will have to come to grips with the need to write a policy reflecting growth and the competition factor — if it wants to retain some control over the beverage business.

But perhaps it doesn't relish the political aspects of coming to grips with such a knotty problem.

Last week Councilman Max Denney said he is ready for city government to withdraw entirely from liquor license matters and let the liquor commission handle licensing entirely on its own, without even a background check of license applicants by Lincoln police.

The council might as well officially throw in the towel. It has done so in effect by sticking to an unrealistic policy — the inflexible ceiling — which the commission no longer honors.

About that emaciated state treasury:

It's not the result of too much spending; it's the result of too little income. Tax rates have been held artificially low for political reasons.

Who's to blame? Who cares?

Everybody can share some of the responsibility.

The fact is that the state's political "leaders," both in the Legislature and among the executive branch members of the Board of Equalization, are reluctant to set realistic tax rates.

Picture the Fourth of July on Mars.

There you are minding your own business when suddenly out of the blue (or black or whatever) comes this thing, thumping down upon your world.

A strange looking creature, all shiny and smooth and odd-shaped. It sits there, bleeping or buzzing or singing a high-pitched whine.

And you watch and wait, careful not to let the thing see you or sense you. When it turns, you run swiftly under a rock, pulling your nose in under you.

But it just sits there, looking at the landscape making that diabolical noise. Just what you thought. It's unintelligent, and you were always sure there was no intelligent life on Earth. Else why the evidence of recurring devastating war on that distant planet?

Here he is . . . the first earthling to reach Mars. And he's a blob. No doubt dangerous. But certainly easily outwitted.

And so you scurry from underneath the rock, turn yourself into a transparent blob and blow by him unnoticed.

And he will certainly tell the other earthlings that there is no life on Mars. Dummy.

NEW YORK — The victory of the Christian Democratic Party over the powerful Communist Party in Italy's general elections is a remarkable tribute to the good sense of the Italian people.

Although recent public opinion polls have shown widespread discontent with the inept leadership of the Catholic-oriented party that has been the dominant political force in Italy for more than a quarter of a century, but which has failed to cope effectively with the country's economic, social and bureaucratic ills, a majority of the Italian people voted against giving the Communists an opportunity to participate in the government.

President Giovanni Leone will undoubtedly call on the Christian Democratic Party to try to form another coalition government. The CDP's only hope of getting a working majority in the Chamber of Deputies is to bring the left-wing Socialists, the Social Democrats (the more moderate Socialists) and the conservative Independents back into the government.

It was the left-wing Socialists who precipitated the general elections a year ahead of time by withdrawing last June from the center-left government in protest against the CDP's austerity program and its refusal to take more radical action on social issues, especially abortion. The Socialist Party paid dearly for this mistake. It suffered severe losses, and will have less than 10% of the seats in the Chamber of Deputies.

The outcome of the elections was also a tribute to the wisdom of U.S. Ambassador John Volpe.

Many political observers thought the Communists would emerge from the elections as the leading political party in Italy. Even Amintore Fanfani, president of the Christian Democratic Party, told William Randolph Hearst Jr., editor-in-chief of the Hearst newspapers, in Rome on June 3 that the Communists and left-wing Socialist Party might win an absolute majority. The next day Ambassador Volpe expressed to Mr. Hearst and this writer his confidence that the Communist-Socialist combination would not gain a majority and that the Christian Democrats would get more votes than the Communists.

The former secretary of transportation and two-time governor of Massachusetts rightly predicted the Communist Party would probably poll about 34% of the vote. Volpe said he was convinced that when it came to the issue of the Communists participating in the government, a majority of the Italian people would vote against it.

The prospects for Italy do not, however, appear bright as a result of the elections. Political

Is An 18-Year-Old Driver More Mature?

Raise Driving Age

Lincoln, Neb.

I can very well sympathize with the "Very Angry and Concerned Citizen" about the bad driving habits of kids. Would it not be possible to raise the driving age from 16 to 18 nationally? Such a change could bring about several economic and social benefits, regardless of the hue and cry of various automobile, oil and highway pressure groups.

First, a significant amount of gasoline would be saved, thus reducing our dependence on foreign oil. Second, much useless and dangerous traffic could be eliminated. Third, the health of the wayward kids would benefit from going on foot or by bicycle, and fourth, I would like to see a teenager ride home drunk on his bicycle. That at least could then be regarded as entertainment by law-abiding citizens rather than as a nuisance and a threat to their safety.

Public Property Destruction

Lincoln, Neb.

Since vandals smashed the Italian statue of the Cupid, it has come to our attention that vandalism problems in this city are approaching all-time highs in both number and the amount of destruction cost. It should be punishable by law, most especially the destruction of public property.

Why the large annual increase in such destruction and what are we doing about it? Since I started my employment with the Lincoln Board of Education nine years ago, I have seen plenty of destruction. It would and should shock any taxpayer.

In the first senior high school where I worked, it was not unusual to find writing and painting on any and all plaster walls and desks, plaster knocked off of corners and walls, electrical switch plates removed, causing blown fuses, public pay phones broken into, badly damaged and broken window and door glass, granite bathroom partitions, toilet stools, mirrors, hallway lockers, doors, paper towel and toilet paper boxes bent and broken.

One day we were asked what to do with all the broken desks. Forty-six broken desks had had to be removed, and they were valued at over $40 per desk.

At the next school, it was much the same, only worse. There was more stealing, such as a completely reconditioned car motor, large hallway fire extinguishers, tools, equipment and nearly anything valuable that was loose. Thirteen good bathroom mirrors were shot out, hallway water fountains broken, bathroom ceiling and walls smoked up by fire in a large wastepaper basket. Electric typewriters costing $600 to replace needed constant repair. Outside park lights were broken and shot out, a Mona Lisa statue was badly damaged and many other problems.

What about the alleged fire-bombing at Pius X High School that caused so much damage to office and surrounding rooms? How about all the window glass shot out of schools all over Lincoln?

Figures compiled showed the cost of repairs or replacing damaged property for schools at $11,000 for 1974. This climbed to $20,000 in 1975. What will it be for 1976? The school system collected only $1,200 to pay for all this damage.

Taxpayers would need only to follow an average custodian around his work area for a few days to assure there there would never be a state school aid bill passed.

It's sad to say but we just may have schooled too many of our young people in the wrong direction.

Let's start enforcing school laws, regulations or rules — or do we have any? If not, let's get some.

Drug To Combat Cancer

Guide, Rock, Neb.

A recent article in the news tells of 16 men indicted for smuggling Laetrile into the United States. The food and drug agents want us to think these indicted men are criminals and crooks, when they have been the life-saving force for thousands of cancer victims.

The Food and Drug Administration has banned the use of this non-toxic vitamin known as B-17 or Amygdalin because they say it is useless as a cancer treatment. Thousands of lives have been saved by this Laetrile treatment. However, it seems their testimony doesn't count.

Cancer patients dole out from $12 billion to $14 billion yearly for orthodox cancer treatments and billions have been given to the American Cancer Institute for research but still more than 1,000 cancer victims die daily in the United States. It seems as if money is spent on finding out what causes cancer but they don't seem to want to know what can prevent and control it. Although it is used in 24 countries, the authorities refused to have it tested on humans when the McNaughton Foundation of San Diego made an application for experimentation.

Dr. Dean Burke of California, recently retired from the American Cancer Institute, says: "Laetrile is being blocked by a few bureaucrats, not for logical, scientific, or medical but for political reasons. They're sitting on the knee of the American Cancer Society and the American Medical Association."

So many favorable reports have come to Washington about Laetrile that Rep. Steve Symms of Idaho with the support of Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Sen. Edward Kennedy has introduced the bill, HR 12573 for legalizing Laetrile.

I urge Star readers to write these senators in support of this bill.

Trout Haul 'Crass'

Ravenna, Neb.

The picture of the foursome and its catch, coupled with the caption "Stout Trout" (whatever that may mean) in the June 23 Star is probably the most obscene photo of purported "angling" I've seen in my 50 years of fishing for trout in this country and Canada.

It reminds one of the buffalo hunts and pigeon shoots when killed game was piled up in sickening drifts and windrows, or the jackrabbit drives here in Nebraska in the early 1900's. It has the "stink" of a Siwash Indian village during the harvesting of the salmon run for the tribe's winter needs.

Regardless of the fact that this nauseating vulgarity was achieved on some faraway Canadian lake accessible only by fly-in, and under the guise of "sportsmanship" (it did appear in the sports section of The Star), the horsing in of a thousand pounds or more of trout can be classified only as uncontrolled butchery. The Star should know that it is completely repugnant to today's environment, as it would have been a century ago to the angling fraternity.

It is obvious from the picture that the four men pictured are highly pleased with themselves and very proud of their accomplishment. Proud? They should hang their heads in shame for defiling the term "sportsmanship" and besmirching the name of trout fishermen throughout the world — and the sports department for giving them the publicity and the five-column spread they did.

May we be preserved from such crassness.

Service Brings Tips

Lincoln, Neb.

Let me give the Barrymore waitress who thinks women "office workers" are such lousy tippers a situation. You and three "office" friends go to lunch. You're seated. Pretty soon, three tables of men are seated. After a while, you realize they've gotten their salads, but you haven't been able to order because your waitress is busy lavishing attention on the young bucks.

By the time you've waited 15 minutes for your check, she's started on an entirely new set. And you've run out of patience, not to mention tip money. After all, women tip for service, not for looking pretty.

All we ask is a little "executive" service. Stop the discrimination and you'll get your tips. Just ask any of the many good waitresses around!

Comprehensive Plan

Lincoln, Neb.

The front page of The Star, June 23, indicates that the county board must "reluctantly" approve a proposed subdivision in Walton because the comprehensive plan is not ready. Now, isn't that a shame? It seems the board would prefer high density subdivisions regardless of what citizens might want.

Perhaps anyone interested in spacious country living had better look into this Walton project while such things are still available.

I would be delighted if the comprehensive plan is never completed. Such plans almost surely obstruct progress, distort economic decisions and interfere with the legitimate affairs of citizens attempting to pursue their own best interests and exercise their individual priorities.

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

Look out, folks, here it comes.

Now six days away: the bicentennial Fourth of July. There will never be another one.

So get out the flag and the fireworks and do your bicentennial thing.

This is a year which has inspired unusual projects.

Apparently responding to the electorate's wishes for less government, the state has decided to deplete its treasury and go broke.

Anybody wanna buy the Capitol Building?

Pushed around by 40 years of presidential power, the staid old Congress decided to go on a bicentennial orgy.

Breaking with tradition, the Democratic Party resolved to turn its back on a proud history of intra-party presidential warfare and steal the traditional Republican posture of party peace and harmony.

Not to be outdone, the GOP has adopted the old Democratic ways — choosing the Kansas City stockyards for its rare presidential bloodletting.

Lincoln, of course, decided to build a bicentennial ditch.

Even the old national pastime, baseball, could not resist a bicentennial lurch as Bowie Kuhn declared martial law and proclaimed himself the world's newest, if least dangerous, dictator. (Suffer him not, fellow Yankee fans.)

With a little imagination, you too can choose a unique bicentennial project. And this coming weekend is the time to spring it.

Break out that old three-cornered hat. It's becoming fashionable — politically.

About that emaciated state treasury:

It's not the result of too much spending; it's the result of too little income. Tax rates have been held artificially low for political reasons.

Who's to blame? Who cares?

Everybody can share some of the responsibility.

The fact is that the state's political "leaders," both in the Legislature and among the executive branch members of the Board of Equalization, are reluctant to set realistic tax rates.

A strange looking creature, all shiny and smooth and odd-shaped. It sits there, bleeping or buzzing or singing a high-pitched whine.

And you watch and wait, careful not to let the thing see you or sense you. When it turns, you run swiftly under a rock, pulling your nose in under you.

But it just sits there, looking at the landscape making that dumb noise. Just what you thought. It's unintelligent, and you were always sure there was no intelligent life on Earth. Else why the evidence of recurring devastating war on that distant planet?

That's no way to run a railroad — although some were operated that way, until they collapsed.

Wouldn't the taxpayers really prefer to have tax rates set at a level adequate to meet the state's obligations and to efficiently manage the day-to-day fiscal operations of state government while keeping a careful eye on state spending?

Only the State Constitution now stands in the way of indebtedness.

State government may not be in debt, but its obligations appear to be exceeding its revenues.

Wouldn't it be best if members of the board sucked it up and established rates at a level where the state is solvent not just on paper, but in fact?

We citizen-taxpayers really wouldn't throw them out for acting responsibly. (All right, who's nodding his head over there?)

Picture the Fourth of July on Mars.

There you are minding your own business when suddenly out of the blue (or black or whatever) comes this thing, thumping down upon your world.

What about the alleged fire-bombing at Pius X High School that caused so much damage to office and surrounding rooms? How about all the window glass shot out of schools all over Lincoln?

Figures compiled showed the cost of repairs or replacing damaged property for schools at $11,000 for 1974. This climbed to $20,000 in 1975. What will it be for 1976? The school system collected only $1,200 to pay for all this damage.

Taxpayers would need only to follow an average custodian around his work area for a few days to assure there there would never be a state school aid bill passed.

It's sad to say but we just may have schooled too many of our young people in the wrong direction.

Let's start enforcing school laws, regulations or rules — or do we have any? If not, let's get some.

First The Pasta, And Then The Borsch

KINGSBURY
SMITH

NEW YORK — The victory of the Christian Democratic Party is a remarkable tribute to the good sense of the Italian people. Although recent public opinion polls have shown widespread discontent with the inept leadership of the Catholic-oriented party that has been the dominant political force in Italy for more than a quarter of a century, but which has failed to cope effectively with the country's economic, social and bureaucratic ills, a majority of the Italian people voted against giving the Communists an opportunity to participate in the government.

While the Communists gained substantially over what they polled in the last parliamentary elections in 1972, they fell four percentage points short of overcoming the Christian Democrats who, at approximately 38.7% of the vote for the Chamber of Deputies, held about even with their 1972 vote. More than 60% of the Italian people voted for the non-Communist parties.

The outcome of the elections was also a tribute to the wisdom of U.S. Ambassador John Volpe.

Many political observers thought the Communists would emerge from the elections as the leading political party in Italy. Even Amintore Fanfani, president of the Christian Democratic Party, told William Randolph Hearst Jr., editor-in-chief of the Hearst newspapers, in Rome on June 3 that the Communists and left-wing Socialist Party might win an absolute majority. The next day Ambassador Volpe expressed to Mr. Hearst and this writer his confidence that the Communist-Socialist combination would not gain a majority and that the Christian Democrats would get more votes than the Communists.

The former secretary of transportation and two-time governor of Massachusetts rightly predicted the Communist Party would probably poll about 34% of the vote. Volpe said he was convinced that when it came to the issue of the Communists participating in the government, a majority of the Italian people would vote against it.

The prospects for Italy do not, however, appear bright as a result of the elections. Political instability is likely to continue and it may prove necessary to hold another general election before the end of next year.

President Giovanni Leone will undoubtedly call on the Christian Democratic Party to try to form another coalition government. The CDP's only hope of getting a working majority in the Chamber of Deputies is to bring the left-wing Socialists, the Social Democrats (the more moderate Socialists) and the conservative Independents back into the government.

It was the left-wing Socialists who precipitated the general elections a year ahead of time by withdrawing last June from the center-left government in protest against the CDP's austerity program and its refusal to take more radical action on social issues, especially abortion. The Socialist Party paid dearly for this mistake. It suffered for severe losses, and will have less than 10% of the seats in the Chamber of Deputies.

The CDP leaders said before the election they would not, under any circumstances, bring the Communists into the government. They will, however, need the support of the Communist Party to curb excessive union wage demands and implement an austerity program to control the present runaway inflation.

Enrico Berlinguer, leader of the Communist Party, said the election results supported his call for an "historic compromise" with the Christian Democrats. To obtain the support of the Communists in parliament, it is virtually certain the CDP will have to give the Communist Party veto power over major domestic, if not foreign policies. Even though they remain outside the government, the Communists are bound to play an increasingly important role in Italy's political life.

Is An 18-Year-Old Driver More Mature?

Raise Driving Age

Lincoln, Neb.

I can very well sympathize with the "Very Angry and Concerned Citizen" about the bad driving habits of kids. Would it not be possible to raise the driving age from 16 to 18 nationally? Such a change could bring about several economic and social benefits, regardless of the hue and cry of various automobile, oil and highway pressure groups.

First, a significant amount of gasoline would be saved, thus reducing our dependence on foreign oil. Second, much useless and dangerous traffic could be eliminated. Third, the health of the wayward kids would benefit from going on foot or by bicycle, and fourth, I would like to see a teenager ride home drunk on his bicycle. That at least could then be regarded as entertainment by law-abiding citizens rather than as a nuisance and a threat to their safety.

Public Property Destruction

Lincoln, Neb.

Since vandals smashed the Italian statue of the Cupid, it has come to our attention that vandalism problems in this city are approaching all-time highs in both number and the amount of destruction cost. It should be punishable by law, most especially the destruction of public property.

Why the large annual increase in such destruction and what are we doing about it? Since I started my employment with the Lincoln Board of Education nine years ago, I have seen plenty of destruction. It would and should shock any taxpayer.

In the first senior high school where I worked, it was not unusual to find writing and painting on any and all plaster walls and desks, plaster knocked off of corners and walls, electrical switch plates removed, causing blown fuses, public pay phones broken into, badly damaged and broken window and door glass, granite bathroom partitions, toilet stools, mirrors, hallway lockers, doors, paper towel and toilet paper boxes bent and broken.

One day we were asked what to do with all the broken desks. Forty-six broken desks had to be removed, and they were valued at over $40 per desk.

At the next school, it was much the same, only worse. There was more stealing, such as a completely reconditioned car motor, large hallway fire extinguishers, tools, equipment and nearly anything valuable that was loose. Thirteen good bathroom mirrors were shot out, hallway water fountains broken, bathroom ceiling and walls smoked up by fire in a large wastepaper basket. Electric typewriters costing $600 to replace needed constant repair. Outside park lights were broken and shot out, a Mona Lisa statue was badly damaged and many other problems.

What about the alleged fire-bombing at Pius X High School that caused so much damage to office and surrounding rooms? How about all the window glass shot out of schools all over Lincoln?

Figures compiled showed the cost of repairs or replacing damaged property for schools at $11,000 for 1974. This climbed to $20,000 in 1975. What will it be for 1976? The school system collected only $1,200 to pay for all this damage.

Drug To Combat Cancer

Guide, Rock, Neb.

A recent article in the news tells of 16 men indicted for smuggling Laetrile into the United States. The food and drug agents want us to think these indicted men are criminals and crooks, when they have been the life-saving force for thousands of cancer victims.

The Food and Drug Administration has banned the use of this non-toxic vitamin known as B-17 or Amygdalin because they say it is useless as a cancer treatment. Thousands of lives have been saved by this Laetrile treatment. However, it seems their testimony doesn't count.

Cancer patients dole out from $12 billion to $14 billion yearly for orthodox cancer treatments and billions have been given

Trout Haul 'Crass'

Ravenna, Neb.

The picture of the foursome and its catch, coupled with the caption "Stout Trout" (whatever that may mean) in the June 23 Star is probably the most obscene photo of purported "angling" I've seen in my 50 years of fishing for trout in this country and Canada.

It reminds one of the buffalo hunts and pigeon shoots when killed game was piled up in sickening drifts and windrows, or the jackrabbit drives here in Nebraska in the early 1900's. It has the "stink" of a Siwash Indian village during the harvesting of the salmon run for the tribe's winter needs.

Regardless of the fact that this nauseating vulgarity was achieved on some faraway Canadian lake accessible only by flying, and under the guise of "sportsmanship" (it did appear in the sports section of The Star), the horsing in of a thousand pounds of trout should be classified only as uncontrolled butchery. The Star should know that it is completely repugnant to today's environment, as it would have been a century ago to the angling fraternity.

It is obvious from the picture that the four men pictured are highly pleased with themselves and very proud of their accomplishment. Proud? They should hang their heads in shame for defiling the term "sportsmanship" and besmirching the name of trout fishermen throughout the world — and the sports department for giving them the publicity and the five-column spread they did.

May we be preserved from such crassness.

Terrain Delays Viking Landing

Pasadena, Calif. (AP) — Turned back by dangerous craters, knobs and pitted terrain, scientists Sunday delayed the scheduled July 4 bicentennial landing of Viking 1 on the Martian surface, possibly for several weeks.

A search began for alternative landing sites.

Viking Project Manager James Martin said recent pictures of the primary landing site showed the area to "have too many unknowns and it could be too hazardous" to risk a landing without first investigating alternative sites.

From the beginning, scientists at Jet Propulsion Laboratory stressed there would be flexibility in choosing a landing site. They said the bicentennial touchdown target was set because of a fortunate conjunction between celestial circumstances and earthly considerations.

The alternative area that now most interests scientists is a river basin about 300 miles northwest of the original landing site, still within the general touchdown region of Chryse. The alternative site is called Chryse Phoenixia.

The Viking team believes Chryse Phoenixia to be an area of gently rolling sand dunes, possibly the deposit basin of a huge Martian river filled with fine materials carried downstream.

The next crucial decision will be made on Wednesday, when scientists will judge from the newest pictures whether a landing is feasible. If so, the touchdown could take place as early as July 8.

However, Martin said the terrain on Chryse Phoenixia may also appear too hazardous, in which case the team would begin studying another alternative landing region — Tritonis Lacus — about 4,000 miles east of Chryse.

In that case, the landing could be delayed until as late as the first week in August.

If such a delay occurs, the project team would have to hold off landing while it tries to put Viking 2 — now more than 5 million miles from the planet — into orbit. It is conceivable, scientists said, that the two identical spacecraft would be circling the planet simultaneously.

The forboding nature of the primary landing site had become more obvious in the last few days as details in photographs transmitted by Viking 1 came in more clearly. The more closely scientists looked at Chryse, the more dangerous it seemed.

Moderate Wins Portuguese Presidency

Lisbon, Portugal (AP) — Gen.

Antonio Ramalho Eanes, an army moderate pledged to install a Socialist premier, won the Portuguese presidency early Monday on the basis of unofficial returns giving him a huge majority.

With more than half the ballots counted in the country's first free presidential election in half a century, the 41-year-old general had rolled up 60% of the total vote over three rivals.

Eanes, credited with a major role in crushing an attempted leftist coup last fall, polled 1,905,172 of the 3.2 million votes tabulated.

His nearest competitor, the far-left candidate Maj. Oteio Saravia de Carvalho, had 17.6%.

"I think Eanes is the winner," said Carvalho.

Premier Jose Pinheiro de

Azevedo, hospitalized last week with a heart attack, ran third with 13.6%. Communist Octavio Pato, the only civilian in the race, was far behind with 8%.

A runoff election would have been required if not one of the candidates had gained a majority.

The study reveals, "There is a tremendous variety of technology" available in the private sector, he said.

But, Herman added, "The key to what technology would be developed lies in the hands of the federal government and not private companies" because corporations are unwilling to spend the vast sums of money needed for commercial development unless the government assumes some of the risks, deregulates gas and oil prices, can guarantee a market and adjusts environmental standards.

"It all depends on what the government does" was the comment heard most often, in one way or another, he said.

Private corporations, he said, "are becoming more and more dependent on federal funding, enmeshed in government procedures and reacting to government policies."

Radio's Gourmet Chef Mike Roy Dies In L.A.

Los Angeles (AP) — Mike Roy, host of local and national radio cooking shows, cookbook author and former network announcer, died late Saturday at his home near here of an apparent heart attack. He was 63.

The radio chef had performed his light-hearted, instructional one-hour show at radio station KNX for 10 years. His five-minute program, "Mike Roy's Cooking Thing," was aired six times a week over the CBS radio network. He had written more than a dozen books.

His sidekick and co-host Dennis Bracken said Roy didn't have a particular specialty. "He liked everything to eat and to drink."

Roy once described his partner as "strictly a meat and potatoes man," claiming that Bracken's favorite food was unadorned bologna sandwiches.

A spokeswoman for KNX said

Roy kept an apartment a few blocks from work for testing recipes before he went on the air. He would rise at 4 a.m., cook until he was satisfied with the dish then dash to the station for his morning program, she said.

He had a varied career before settling into radio. Before he was 21 he had worked as a newspaperman, radio announcer, publicist and state safety director in his native North Dakota.

He became interested in cooking when he worked at a hotel. Later he was the business manager of a baseball club and worked at several radio stations as an editor and announcer.

Roy was the announcer for several 1940s radio programs, including "Duffy's Tavern" and "Abbott and Costello." Later he hosted the nation's first televised cooking show, "Secrets of a Gourmet."

His spokesman said Roy didn't have a particular specialty. "He liked everything to eat and to drink."

Study Cites Industry Energy Indifference

New York (UPI) — Private corporations are not fully using their research, manufacturing and marketing expertise to develop alternate sources of energy and instead are relying on the government for leadership in energy development, according to a study released Sunday.

The study, a three-year project costing $70,000, was completed by a nonprofit energy research organization, Inform. About a third of the funding was provided by the Federal Energy Research and Development Administration.

"The most startling fact which Inform discovered is that, even though industry will eventually research, manufacture, and market alternative systems, industry, for the present, is not the prime mover in energy development," the study's authors said.

"In general, corporations work on technologies best suited to their short-term interests. They do not research and develop energy technologies to solve national problems. They are mainly interested in preserving and extending the market for their products, which are often in competition with other energy technologies."

Joanna Underwood, director of Inform, said 142 corporations with interests in various aspects of energy development were surveyed, along with various government agencies and special interest groups. The 800-page study is believed to be the most extensive examination of alternate energy resources yet compiled.

Stewart Herman, the 27-year-old co-author of the study, said that while the 142 companies surveyed are involved in 207 energy development projects, from solar cooling and heating, to coal gasification and liquification and trash-to-energy conversion, few were willing to proceed without government assistance. His sidekick and co-host Dennis Bracken said Roy didn't have a particular specialty. "He liked everything to eat and to drink."

Roy once described his partner as "strictly a meat and potatoes man," claiming that Bracken's favorite food was unadorned bologna sandwiches.

Los Angeles Policeman Shot By Another Officer

Los Angeles (AP) — A police officer was in critical condition Sunday after being shot by a fellow officer who failed to recognize him as he approached for help, police said.

A spokesman said Officer Stanley Manning, 31, was off duty and was on his way home at 3 a.m. when he spotted what he thought were burglars on a rooftop in Reseda. He flashed his automobile high beam lights to attract officers in a passing cruiser, according to Lt. Charles Higbie.

Manning got out of his car and was approaching the others when his gun fell from his clothing and he bent down to pick it up. When he stood up with the gun in his hand, the officers believed he was threatening them and officer Donald Olsen opened fire, Higbie said.

Manning, a 10-year police veteran, was struck in the chest and hip. Olsen's partner, Daniel Johnson, 28, recognized Manning after the shooting, Higbie said.

Olsen, 29, has been on the force for one year. Higbie said no charges would be filed.

"It was just one of those unfortunate things," Higbie said. "It was a case of mistaken identity."

Stereo Equipment Stolen From House

Stereo equipment valued at $1,500 was stolen Saturday night from the home of Roger A. Boden, 2537 S St., police reported.

The burglar apparently entered Boden's house by cutting a screen on a rear porch window and reaching inside and unlocking the door.

A reel-to-reel tape deck, a turntable, and a four-channel stereo receiver were missing.

Brothers Are Rare

Julius von Uhl proudly displays a litter of three tiger cubs born at the Baltimore County Fair in Middle River, Md. The two cubs on the right are extremely rare white tigers. The cubs were born to an 8-year-old, three-quarters Siberian tigress and a half-Bengal, half-Siberian sire. Three years ago, the mother gave birth to another white tiger. There are now nine whites in the U.S. and 36 worldwide.

AT&T Chairman Sees 25¢ Pay Phone Calls

Washington (UPI) — The chairman of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. said a pay telephone call probably will cost a quarter in most places.

John DeButts also said home telephone bills would continue to rise if inflation returned to 6 to 7% or more and we can't compensate for that with new technology and more efficient operations, then we'll have to ask for rate increases."

"In a couple of states," DeButts said, "we're asking for increases to 25 cents, but I don't know how good the prospects are."

As for home phones, the AT&T chairman said, "We can stand an inflation rate of 3 to 4% in a year and absorb it through improved productivity. But if we get inflation in the range of 6 to 7% or more and we can't compensate for that with new technology and more efficient operations, then we'll have to ask for rate increases."

DeButts also predicted that by the year 2000 most customers will be able to dial to Europe without going through an operator.

35 Homes, 15 Businesses Hit By Omaha Twisters

Omaha (AP) — Authorities estimated Sunday that Saturday's tornadoes and wind in Omaha's western outskirts struck about 35 homes and 15 businesses.

About 23 persons were treated for injuries at Omaha hospitals.

They said an accurate estimate of property damage will not be known for several days.

Residents and volunteers started repairs and carried possessions to temporary living quarters and Red Cross officials were assisting.

Damage was heaviest in southwestern suburban Omaha areas. Boys Town also was hit, as was the Kraft Chevrolet Co. in northwest Omaha.

The Omaha Public Power District said all power was restored Sunday.

In Omaha itself, there was little except damaged trees and power lines down, according to Eugene Brailey, assistant to Mayor Edward Zorinsky. Many homeowners reported hail damage.

The hardest hit residential area was the Leawood Southwest area near 167th and Gold Streets. Business damage was most extensive in the Cornhusker Industrial Park along West Center Road between 152nd and 160th Streets.

Two student cottages under construction were heavily damaged, the roof of a storage warehouse was torn off and a trailer tipped over at Boys Town.

Residents of the southwest Omaha area hit said the tornado developed rapidly and they heard no sirens.

The National Weather Service said the two twisters in the Omaha area covered a narrow path, and much of the damage may have come from winds which ranged up to 90 miles per hour and more.

Chief meteorologist James Zoller said most damage was caused by straight-line winds, accompanying heavy rain and hail which moved through the city.

Jeff Miller, 19, a clerk at supermarket, said he saw a funnel over the store parking lot just before sirens sounded.

"It started going faster and faster," he said. "There was garbage going right up into it."

Strong winds also caused considerable damage to trees and building roofs at Julian in Nemaha County Saturday night.

Several grain bins were knocked down and an ammonia tank was pushed over. Some residents reported they detected the odor of ammonia for a time, but no leak in the tank was found.

Some Feel Lucky After Tornado

Minden, Iowa (UPI) — Down-home country hospitality and a dedicated spirit to rebuild prevailed in this German settlement community Sunday as farmers, townspeople and volunteers faced the aftermath of the worst disaster in Minden's 101-year history.

"God was on our side," said Mrs. Orville L. Wedel, whose husband operates the hardware store along Minden's main street.

The clocks in this western Iowa town of 488 stopped at 5:50 p.m. Saturday night as a tornado sliced through it.

The figures released Sunday were two homes destroyed, 17 homes with major damage and 54 others with minor damage.

Twenty businesses were classified as either destroyed or having major damage while 13 more incurred minor damages. Miraculously, there were only a handful of injuries, with the most serious a broken leg suffered during the hysteria following the tornado.

Has the tornado attacked at 9 p.m., there would have been some 90 persons crammed into Minden's Community House for a dance in conjunction with the town's annual carnival.

As it was, Mayor Orvel Kaven and 10 other persons were inside preparing for the festivities.

The Community House Sunday was a mass of splinters. Only an upright grand piano along with a wooden stool remained — out of place to say the least — in position on the red carpet floor.

Kaven declared Minden a disaster area and asked State Civil Defense Director Don Hinman, who toured the area as Gov.

Robert D. Ray's representative, for assistance.

Kaven said total damages would be at least $1 million.

Hinman estimated structural damages between $500,000 and $750,000, but that didn't include the contents lost inside the buildings, or what was left of them.

Officials credited a passerby, perhaps a stranger, with preventing loss of life.

"My brother and his son were at the fire station," said Herman Rieber. "Somebody drove up and said 'there's a tornado coming' and drove off. Harry and Melvin didn't ask any questions. They just went inside and hit the damn siren."

Replacement Homes Worth 68% More

Omaha (AP) — The average new home built because of the tornado that sliced through an area of West Omaha in May of 1975 costs 68 per cent more than the house it replaced.

In most cases, book values of the Douglas County assessor show that these homes are the same size but have a higher market value because they are new.

"Before, they had an old home," said Chief Deputy Assessor Robert Rice, "and now they have a new one."

By law, the assessor's office has to determine the current market value of a home and a new one is worth far more than an old one.

He said values also increased in some cases because of larger homes.

Rice said by the Jan. 1 assessment date this year, 186 of about 300 homes destroyed by the tornado had been replaced.

Another 25 were partially rebuilt and officials expect that more will be up by the time assessors recheck properties next January.

Dead Tigers' Value Estimated

Omaha (AP) — An authority on exotic cats said the five Sumatran tigers which died last week at the Henry Doorly Zoo in Omaha may have been worth between $30,000 and $35,000.

Zoo Director Lee Simmons said he is not sure of their value because no one has sold fullbred Sumatran tigers within the United States in recent years.

But the operator of a rare feline breeding compound in Florida, Robert Baudy, said the Sumatrans are worth between $6,000 and $7,000 each.

Dr. Simmons said he may learn this week a key to the mystery of what killed the tigers.

Omaha Storms 'Had Potential' To Do More

Omaha (AP) — James Zoller, meteorologist in charge of the Omaha Weather Service, said the storm system which hit the Omaha area Saturday evening "had potential" for much greater destruction.

But, Zoller said "it just didn't kick off." He described the twister that hit west of Omaha as a "mini-tornado." He said the twister that hit Minden, Iowa, at about the same time was far worse.

Zoller said severe storms "literally exploded" about 3 p.m. along a cold front that then extended along a narrow line from Norfolk through Columbus to Grand Island.

He said that heavy storms first hit the Sioux City, Iowa, area.

The most severe weather developed in the Omaha area, where the cold front met warm, moist air moving up from the Gulf of Mexico.

Take the sting out of your medical expenses.

Number 5 in a series designed to help you save money.

Save On Doctor Bills

1. The best way to save is, of course, to try and stay healthy. Good nutrition, cleanliness, an up-to-date immunization program, an annual physical and early treatment of any disease or injury all pay off.
2. Get a family doctor who maintains records on the whole family. He can diagnose some problems without repeating costly tests he's made in the past. He can advise you on ways to control your medical spending.
3. It costs less to call your doctor first. Most physicians welcome this approach and will suggest that you come into the office only when necessary.
4. Check to see if you're eligible for free or low cost community health services especially for immunizations, chest X-rays, and other specialized programs.

Save On Drugs

1. Ask your doctor to prescribe medication by the generic name, if possible, instead of the brand name.
2. Shop around before buying prescribed drugs. Prescription prices are available at most drug and discount drug stores for comparison purposes.
3. Watch your spending on useless medicines: unnecessary amounts of vitamins, cold remedies, reducing pills, etc.

Save On Insurance

1. Group insurance at work or through a fraternal organization, professional association, or labor union is most often a good value.
2. Get a copy of the proposed policy and look for:
  - a) Exclusions — the more exclusions there are, the less you're getting.
  - b) Does it pay only when you're in the hospital?

- c) How much of the hospital bill will it pay? How much of the surgeon's fee?
- d) Determine the limits of coverage. Some pay only for a specified period after start of illness; others pay without limit.
- e) Check the amount of deduction.
- f) Check age limits. Some policies end their coverage after age 60 or 65 and some don't cover children from the moment of birth.
- g) Check maternity benefits.
- h) Can it be canceled at the discretion of the company if you collect "too often"?
- i) If you have more than one policy and some coverage is duplicated, make sure both companies will pay in the event of a claim.

Federal Wildlife Managers Are Part Hunters, Part Public Relations Men

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Bill Simmons gets up early every morning to go trapping and hunting. What's more, he gets paid for it by the Fish and Wildlife Service of the U.S. Interior Department.

Simmons' boss, Robert Kelley, chief of the service in Lincoln, describes his entire staff of 15 professional wildlife management experts as "unique people of whom I am very proud."

"It takes not only a good hunter, but a top notch public relations man as well," Kelley said.

The job consists of protecting farm animals from damage by wildlife. In Nebraska, this usually involves eliminating a coyote that has started killing pigs, chickens, calves or sheep as a way of life. Or it can be removing a raccoon from a chicken house where he has been stealing eggs.

"The idea is to get the animal causing damage and let the rest of the wildlife live a normal life," Simmons explained.

Trapping Done in Between

"If you don't like driving a pickup you won't like doing this for a living. Mostly it is driving from one farm to another with some walking and trapping in between," he said.

A day spent with Simmons reveals the job also requires a very sophisticated knowledge of the habits of coyotes, raccoons and foxes. Simmons will follow a trail and study the habits of the animal that has been raiding a farmer's sheep pen or chicken house.

Once an area is located where the problem animal frequently travels alone, reducing the possibility of trapping an innocent animal, a hole is dug and a trap is covered with soft dirt and baited.

The bait can be urine from a female coyote, coyote manure or a bit of cornstalk that was dipped into a jar of foul-smelling, rotten deer meat not feeding him," he explains. before it is left on the trap.

EPA Limits Methods Simmons uses no meat in the bait. "We are baiting the coyote, steel trap. "It is about the only legal way left to catch a coyote. They are too smart for a box trap and the Environmental Protection Agency has eliminated the bulk of the other available methods," Simmons said.

A box trap does work on a raccoon if you have one large enough to hold him.

"A really big one will stick out when he trips the trap and can successfully back out," Simmons said. "We usually capture them alive and release them some place far away from where they are stealing eggs."

Farmers who have been suffering severe losses have great respect for Simmons. "We were losing 100 pigs a year until he started trapping here. At today's prices, it gets pretty expensive to feed hogs to a coyote family," said John Knabe of Nebraska.

Knabe said he lost only eight pigs since the trapper had caught a pair of killer coyotes.

Kenneth Hanzeke of DuBois lost 165 hogs worth $20,000 at market weight before the coyote population by organizing a massive hunt or putting out poison," he said.

"They may have to call in the evening because we are gone most of the time during the day. There are times when even the Lincoln office has everyone out. But if they keep trying they can reach us," Kelley said.

Kelley insists the proper title for the service is "animal damage control."

"We get calls about birds, badgers, snakes, skunks, raccoon and even pocket gophers, in addition to coyotes. Almost any wild animal can be a nuisance or cause serious damage," Kelley said.

The United Dairy Industry Association has decided it must spend 77 cents for each person in the country in an effort to educate them to the food value of dairy products.

This is undoubtedly the largest farmer-financed effort to promote a family of food products.

Some of the money will be spent on consumer research, new product development and nutrition research, all of which eventually will expand the market for milk and other products made from milk.

UDIA spent $31 million, or 17 cents per capita, in 1975 for a program that seems to be aiding the dairyman in improving his market.

It is interesting to note that this is approximately the anticipated income from the beef checkoff program now authorized by Congress but which must still be approved by the cattlemen in a national referendum sometime in early 1977.

of the world's developing countries past year.

India, in particular, has a record crop, but worldwide the improvement has been noticeable.

Ironically, in the developed countries the increase in food production has been only about 1% on a worldwide basis.

Dry weather in Minnesota, Wisconsin, South Dakota, the high plains of Texas and the winter wheat areas is holding down production in North America.

Western Europe is in weather as is a large area of Australia, much of Russia and mainland China.

The world can learn to feed itself, but it will take good weather, technology, fertilizer, machinery and an incentive to produce food (profit) credit. Otherwise, it is a hopeless task.

Farmers continue to receive a smaller share of the dollar consumers spend for food each year. In 1975, the farmer collected 45 cents of the grocery dollar. In 1973 it was 46 cents.

Some record keepers expect to see it drop below 40 cents before the end of the decade. Marketing costs and processing costs are rising faster than farm income from food.

This is mostly due to the lack of efficiency in the nation's food processing and distribution system.

Yields were increased, tillage costs reduced, but water flow was impeded. However, the infiltration was increased, erosion dropped a half ton of soil per acre and the water was cleaner when it ran into the return flow system.

The study is continuing with emphasis on weed and disease control methods to be associated with the new farming technique.

The United Farm Workers Union (UFW) is defending the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) order to have a toilets and a drinking water and hand washing facility within 5 minutes walking distance of workers on a farm.

Given the fact that farm workers must move about a good deal in their job, it will require a lot of toilets to get the job done or the worker must tow his portable unit behind him as he works.

UFW spokesmen claim there is danger of a spread of disease. If this is the case, the diseased workers should be refused the right to work in any field where food is produced.

Farmers long ago learned to deal with their physical needs before they leave home to go to the field and during their noon lunch breaks.

This whole silly mess is one of the strongest arguments I have seen in years for a family farm operation, where the home is reasonably close to the fields, to meet the various physical needs of the food producers of the nation.

It doesn't hurt the quality of the meat, but it is hard on the cattle. They look bad, feel bad and don't grow as well as they would if they didn't have the parasites and they cost more to care for because of the extended time it takes to get them ready for market.

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

The rain that came in the past week will aid the filling of wheat in the western areas of Nebraska, but in the east and south the crop already is past the stage where it will get much help.

Grain sorghum started growing again many places and some seed still in the soil will now germinate. Unless there is a very late killing frost, little of it will produce grain this late in the year.

Continued rains are essential if the state is to make much of a contribution to the world's food supply because more than 85% of the state is still depending on mother nature for water.

There was good news for grain farmers in terms of a tighter than expected supply of feed grains and soybeans. Increasing

"They took 17 one night and just killed eight and left them lay another night. I have lost pigs weighing 100 pounds, which is hard to believe, but it happened one night while I was sitting in the hog house with a shotgun, waiting for the coyote," he said.

Farmers Check Traps

Farmers in the program are asked to check the traps daily so an animal can be killed to prevent a slow death in a trap.

"They do a good job unless they get behind in their field work. Farmers are very interested in our technique but most don't have time to run a trapping operation themselves," Simmons said.

Kelley agreed and said the average farmer is a "good environmentalist."

"It is a lot better to have a program like this run by a professional than to have a group of farmers suffering losses seek revenge on the whole number of the nearest trapper from their county agent.

"They may have to call in the evening because we are gone most of the time during the day. There are times when even the Lincoln office has everyone out. But if they keep trying they can reach us," Kelley said.

Kelley insists the proper title for the service is "animal damage control."

Minimum tillage can work with ditch irrigation, according to a three-year study just released by the Agricultural Research Service. Leaving a lot of crop residue is messy, but it has a number of advantages for the crop.

There was good news for grain farmers in terms of a tighter than expected supply of feed grains and soybeans. Increasing hog numbers and increasing demand for feed grains from exporters is a real price aid.

Mainland China apparently bought a big batch of soybeans from Brazil, but nobody knows how big. This could indicate some major food production problems in China because it normally exports soybeans. U.S. sales of wheat and feed grain to the Chinese could be possible this year.

Russia's crop should be better than last year, but it still is far below its goal. The Russians probably will be out buying grain in the world markets again.

Expanded income throughout the world has increased the world's food wants, but the lack of rain in many of the richer countries is frustrating the supply side of the ledger. Americans aren't the only people in the world who need a lot of regular rain showers this year.

Fish Grades Key To Quality

If you like fish but don't like to spend hours on the bank of a lake or stream, you may want to make sure you're getting the most for your money when you purchase fish at the supermarket.

The U.S. Department of Commerce (USDA) provides a voluntary fee-for-service fishery products inspection and grading service to processors.

This service provides the mechanism for processors to mark their products as to quality or grade and provides the consumer quality assurance.

Each grade standard has a different meaning.

Grade A means top or best quality. Grade A products are uniform in size, particularly free of blemishes and defects, in excellent condition and possess good flavor for the species.

Grade B means good quality. Grade B products may not be as uniform in size or as free from blemishes or defects as Grade A products. They may be termed a general commercial grade, quite suitable for most purposes.

When you buy a refrigerator or freezer
LOOK FOR THIS SEAL

The above seal is the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturer's (AHAM) way of assuring the public that the calculations of total refrigeration volume and total shelf area of a household refrigerator or freezer have been independently verified. This certification program is open to all manufacturers, both members and non-members of AHAM.

In addition to the calculations of refrigerated volume and shelf area, the AHAM Seal also certifies as to the energy consumption of the unit in kilowatt hours of energy consumed per month. Each make and model which bears the AHAM Seal is listed in the AHAM Directory of Certification.

If you would like further information about this program or would like to know more about a particular refrigerator or freezer, contact your Customer Service Representative at the Lincoln Electric System. # Home-Canning, Pickling Help Avoid Fish Bones

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

For those who don't like fish because of its bones, there is an answer.

Try it pickled or canned and the bones dissolve themselves, according to Liz Huff, publications editor of the State Game and Parks Commission.

Carp, which is famous for its many bones, is "excellent pickled," and tastes like salmon when it's canned, she said.

"Pressure canning is as good a way to fix carp as any," she said, noting that the bones are eliminated and it can be used as a substitute for the expensive salmon.

The simple process involves cutting the fish in chunks, precooking it slightly to bring out the flavor, putting it in jars and then in the pressure canner for processing.

Pickling fish is another relatively-easy process, according to Ms. Huff, while the ancient process of smoking fish is one of the easiest ways to prepare fish.

However, the key is in the brining, she says.

After brining, the length of time the fish is left in the smoker depends upon many factors: thickness of the fish chunks, how heavily loaded the smoker may be and the outside temperature.

Commercial or homemade smokers may be used, according to Ms. Huff, who notes that they may be made from old refrigerators and freezers, garbage cans or other 50-gallon drums.

Companies Pondering

— Containers and wrapping should be intact.

— Packages should be free of "drip" or ice; this may indicate the contents have thawed and been refrozen.

— Cello-wrap packages should not be discolored or show other signs of freezer burn.

— Breaded fish products should remain separated in the package.

— If poor quality products are purchased inadvertently, they should be returned to the store at once.

Filleting Your Catch Helps Preserve Fresh Fish Flavor

By GERRY SWITZER

Star Staff Writer

Freshly-caught fish — whether from a rushing brook, a lake or the sea — is, to many, the best of good summer-time eating.

However, when you're on a weekend fishing trip some 200 miles from home, you need to have some means for taking care of the fish until you can get it home and into the refrigerator or freezer.

Fresh fish tastes best if cleaned and eaten as soon as possible, so the longer fish can be kept alive on a stringer in the water, the better.

But once the fish is dead, it should be cleaned immediately to prevent deterioration which occurs when fish are exposed to warm air.

Cleaning fish promptly also preserves fish flavor, and light washing and chilling will insure retention of juices and flavor.

Keep On Ice

Fish on ice will keep for some time and experts warn that the fish should be kept on ice rather than ice water. Often if the fish is kept in ice water for any length of time before it is frozen, it becomes mushy.

If two days or more will elapse before you can get your catch home, an attempt should be made to get the fish frozen.

Dry ice may be used, but care should be taken to wrap the fish carefully so it doesn't touch the ice itself.

Fish may be frozen in a variety of forms or cuts:

—Whole — as they come from the water.
—Drawn — whole fish with entrails removed.

—Dressed or pan-dressed — whole fish with scales and entrails removed, usually with head, tail and fins removed.

—Steaks — cross-section slices from large dressed fish.

—Fillet — sides of the fish, cut lengthwise away from the backbone.

Filleting fish is the neatest and quickest way to prepare the fish and also conserves storage space when trying to keep the fish on ice when refrigeration is not immediately available.

Athens, Greece (UPI) — Greece expects four million tourists this year, and this number may double within the next five years. George Daskalakis, president of the National Tourist Organization, told newsmen recently.

To meet requirements, Greece plans to increase the number of hotel beds available from 190,000 to 240,000, Daskalakis said.

Tourists Pick Greece

—Make the first cut just behind the gills and slice down to the bone.

—Without removing blade, turn it and slice straight along the backbone to the tail, cutting the fillet away from the rest of the fish.

—After slicing the fillet off at the tail, turn the fish over and repeat the procedure on the other side.

—Remove the rib section by inserting the blade close to rib bones and slicing entire section away. (This should be done before skin is removed to keep waste to a minimum).

—Remove the skin from each fillet by inserting knife at tail and cutting meat from the skin.

—Lightly wash fillets to preserve tasty juices and keep meat in its firm natural state.

—Fillets and fish steaks should be given a 30-second dip in a salt water solution before wrapping and freezing. A suggested solution is 2/3 cup of salt to one gallon of water.

Should Wrap Fish

Fish, like other meats, should be wrapped for freezing in moisture-vapor-resistant coverings to make the package air-tight and to prevent drying.

Two layers of waxed paper should be placed between steaks and fillets so that individual frozen pieces can be separated easily.

Fish should then be wrapped in freezer paper and placed in the freezer. The packages should be spread with recommended maximum storage period being between six and nine months.

Frozen fish, fillets and steaks may be cooked as if they were in the unfrozen form, but additional cooking time must be allowed.

When fish are to be breaded and fried, or stuffed, it is more convenient to thaw them first to make handling easier.

Fish should be thawed in its original wrapping in the refrigerator; for best results, it should be cooked immediately after thawing.

Filleting Your Catch Helps Preserve Fresh Fish Flavor

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Freshly-caught fish — whether from a rushing brook, a lake or the sea — is, to many, the best of good summer-time eating.

However, when you're on a weekend fishing trip some 200 miles from home, you need to have some means for taking care of the fish until you can get it home and into the refrigerator or freezer.

Fresh fish tastes best if cleaned and eaten as soon as possible, so the longer fish can be kept alive on a stringer in the water, the better.

But once the fish is dead, it should be cleaned immediately to prevent deterioration which occurs when fish are exposed to warm air.

Cleaning fish promptly also preserves fish flavor, and light washing and chilling will insure retention of juices and flavor.

Keep On Ice

Fish on ice will keep for some time and experts warn that the fish should be kept on ice rather than ice water. Often if the fish is kept in ice water for any length of time before it is frozen, it becomes mushy.

If two days or more will elapse before you can get your catch home, an attempt should be made to get the fish frozen.

—Dressed or pan-dressed — whole fish with scales and entrails removed, usually with head, tail and fins removed.

—Steaks — cross-section slices from large dressed fish.

—Fillets — sides of the fish, cut lengthwise away from the backbone.

Filleting fish is the neatest and quickest way to prepare the fish and also conserves storage space when trying to keep the fish on ice when refrigeration is not immediately available.

According to Lowell Johnson of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, it is best to use a filleting knife but any thin narrow-bladed knife will do.

Demonstrated Method

Below is the step-by-step procedure as demonstrated by Johnson at a meeting sponsored by the Lancaster County Extension Office:

—Make the first cut just behind the gills and slice down to the bone.

—Without removing blade, turn it and slice straight along the backbone to the tail, cutting the fillet away from the rest of the fish.

—After slicing the fillet off at the tail, turn the fish over and repeat the procedure on the other side.

—Remove the rib section by inserting the blade close to rib bones and slicing entire section away. (This should be done before skin is removed to keep waste to a minimum).

—Remove the skin from each fillet by inserting knife at tail and cutting meat from the skin.

—Lightly wash fillets to preserve tasty juices and keep meat in its firm natural state.

Fillets and fish steaks should be given a 30-second dip in a salt water solution before wrapping and freezing. A suggested solution is 2/3 cup of salt to one gallon of water.

Should Wrap Fish

Fish, like other meats, should be wrapped for freezing in moisture-vapor-resistant coverings to make the package air-tight and to prevent drying.

Bureau Booking Busy
 Hartford (AP) — The Greater Hartford Convention and Visitors Bureau said it booked four times as much business in the last 18 months as it did in the last ten years. A bureau spokesman said more than $20 million in business has been booked in the last 18 months.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from the young girl who had been used by her father for sexual pleasure, and I wondered if the girl's mother had provided tight fitting, revealing clothes for her beautiful daughter.

When in missionary work in Africa, my wife and I were at a roadside marketplace when a very shapely, young, scantily clad Belgian girl walked by. An African workman remarked to his companion, "dumba tshe paka landja!" We knew the language, he said, "The entire body is right outside!"

If mothers and daughters conspire to draw the attentions of men to their beautiful young bodies, a few fathers cannot help but be overcome by the desires constantly aroused in their own homes. When God-fearing parents advocate modesty, they are not being prudish — they are being realistic and practical.

Exposing All Brings Temptation

Your comment is true, the father is "sick." But there is a sickness in our society that may have contributed much to that father's malignancy.

JAMES STEVENSON, PASTOR

DEAR ABBY: You've had several letters in your column from young girls who have been sexually abused by their fathers, stepfathers, or "funny uncles." But I've never seen a letter from a young boy who had been used in that way by a female relative.

I was that kind of a victim until I was nearly 10 years old, but I was bribed and threatened so I never told anyone.

Abby, please continue to alert all parents to keep their eyes open where their children are concerned. And tell young people not to be afraid to report such improper activities to a teacher, a trusted adult friend, relative or even the local police.

Also, the Children's Protective

Society and/or the county welfare department can help.

MY SISTER'S VICTIM

DEAR VICTIM: I have, and I shall continue to do so. This problem is far more widespread than most people suspect.

DEAR ABBY: GRANDMA makes a good point when she criticizes young housewives for buying only TV dinners, frozen chicken pies and boxes of mixes.

My bride used to dish up similar junk foods along with plenty of canned goods. One day I finally said to her, "Honey, why don't you make things from scratch like my mother used to?"

My dutiful wife high-tailed it down to the corner grocery store, walked up to the proprietor and asked, "Where do you keep the scratch?"

A Famous Hand

By B. JAY BECKER

By using this convention, known as Astro, North was able to paint a good picture of his hand. South ultimately landed in five clubs, which he easily made. Declarer lost two diamond tricks, period.

At the other table, where a U.S. pair were North-South, the bidding went:

West North East South
 4♦ Pass Pass Dble

The Americans were not playing Astro and North overcalled the spade bid with two hearts. When East bid two spades, South jumped to four hearts, but then found himself faced with a difficult decision when West bid four spades.

South elected to double, but this did not turn out well when West proceeded to make the contract. He lost a spade, a heart and a club. So Norway gained 990 points on the deal, scoring 400 points at the first table and 590 points at the second table.

One must surely sympathize with the American South for choosing to double four spades instead of going on in hearts. He knew much less about North's hand than his opposite number at the first table, who had much more explicit information to lean on. The double, from South's view, seemed more likely to produce a plus score than a five heart bid.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

There are many artificial bidding conventions a partnership can adopt which, when the right hand comes along, prove very effective. For example, consider this deal played in the 1970 world championship in the match between Norway and the United States.

With Norway North-South, the bidding went as shown. The two spade bid, as played by the Norwegian pair, indicated a hand with five hearts and either five diamonds or five clubs.

 4 ♠ Pass Pass Dble

The Americans were not playing Astro and North overcalled the spade bid with two hearts. When East bid two spades, South jumped to four hearts, but then found himself faced with a difficult decision when West bid four spades.

South elected to double, but this did not turn out well when West proceeded to make the contract. He lost a spade, a heart and a club. So Norway gained 990 points on the deal, scoring 400 points at the first table and 590 points at the second table.

One must surely sympathize with the American South for choosing to double four spades instead of going on hearts. He knew much less about North's hand than his opposite number at the first table, who had much more explicit information to lean on. The double, from South's view, seemed more likely to produce a plus score than a five heart bid.

With Norway North-South, the bidding went as shown. The two spade bid, as played by the Norwegian pair, indicated a hand with five hearts and either five diamonds or five clubs.

Albion (AP) — An Albion man was in satisfactory condition at a Norfolk hospital after being shot on an Albion street.

Roman Borer Jr., who was in his 20s, was shot in the abdomen during a "shouting match" according to Larry Bird, Boone County attorney.

Bird said Daniel J. Krohn, 21, of Albion, apparently shot the victim with a .22-caliber pistol.

He said charges will be filed early next week, adding that it is possible both men will be charged in connection with the incident.

The delegates also chose Ralston to host the 1977 state convention. No date for the convention has been set.

Water Cleanup To Begin Soon

A major effort to clean up Nebraska waters will begin soon, with preliminary work already well underway.

Dayle Williamson, Nebraska Natural Resources Commission executive secretary, said federal officials have conditionally approved Nebraska's $887,000 application for the water quality planning program.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has also awarded the NRC conditional okay of its continuing planning process document explaining how Nebraska's pollution problem will be evaluated and attacked.

The NRC has submitted an outline of the Nebraska work plan, another required planning document due Nov. 1.

Williamson said when the NRC satisfies all the government requirements, nearly $1 million in federal funds will be released to underwrite the statewide effort to identify water pollution problems in Nebraska's 13 river basins.

Federal law divides pollution problems into two categories, point source and nonpoint source. Work began several years ago on the former, which comes from household, industrial and feedlot wastes.

The new effort, Williamson said, deals primarily with nonpoint source pollution, which comes from chemicals, agents and trash washing from yards and roadways, and field soil erosion.

Each of the 13 river basins will have a policy advisory committee, Williamson said, consisting of chief elected officials from local governments, citizens whose interests are affected by the clean water effort and NRC members.

Each committee will be responsible for examining data provided by water resources professionals reflecting local concerns and for establishing priorities for specific programs.

"We hope to have these important local groups organized by mid-July, and I cannot overemphasize their significance," Williamson said.

Corn Borer Problem Rests With Weather

The weather holds an important key to the probability of European corn borer infestations soon in Nebraska, a University of Nebraska extension entomologist said.

Robert E. Roselle said weather conditions during the moth flight and egg laying periods of the corn borer will govern the buildup and severity of an infestation.

Spring moths deposit eggs on taller corn in June, Roselle explained. Borers that hatch from these eggs are the first brood that can reduce yields by damaging vessels that transport nutrients and water to leaves, he said.

"The number of eggs that hatch, and borers that enter the stalk will depend upon weather in mid to late June," he said. Hot, dry winds will cause eggs to dry and fall from leaves; also, cool, wet nights will limit the activity of moths. Many eggs appear to have been destroyed by the hot, dry winds in mid-June which will tend to reduce the potential first brood.

However, moths are still flying, and a few warm, calm nights may see enough eggs and larvae to cause damage in some locations."

Feasibility of control cannot be judged by the number of moths observed, he said, and added that the most reliable method of determining if controls might be profitable is to watch for the borer feeding signs on leaves emerging from whorls.

Corn Borer Problem Rests With Weather

The weather holds an important key to the probability of European corn borer infestations soon in Nebraska, a University of Nebraska extension entomologist said.

Robert E. Roselle said weather conditions during the moth flight and egg laying periods of the corn borer will govern the buildup and severity of an infestation.

Spring moths deposit eggs on taller corn in June, Roselle explained. Borers that hatch from these eggs are the first brood that can reduce yields by damaging vessels that transport nutrients and water to leaves, he said.

"The number of eggs that hatch, and borers that enter the stalk will depend upon weather in mid to late June," he said. Hot, dry winds will cause eggs to dry and fall from leaves; also, cool, wet nights will limit the activity of moths. Many eggs appear to have been destroyed by the hot, dry winds in mid-June which will tend to reduce the potential first brood. However, moths are still flying, and a few warm, calm nights may see enough eggs and larvae to cause damage in some locations."

Feasibility of control cannot be judged by the number of moths observed, he said, and added that the most reliable method of determining if controls might be profitable is to watch for the borer feeding signs on leaves emerging from whorls.

Shipping Season Begun For Wheat, Small Grain

Wheat and small grains began a new shipping season June 1 because of a change in the official USDA grain market reporting system. The old date was July 1.

The shipping season for soybeans begins Sept. 1, and the season for corn and sorghum begins Oct. 1.

These figures report total amount of grain exported since that grain's season began as compared with the same date last year.

	This Year	Last Year
Soybeans	493,774,000 bu	346,622,000 bu

Ethel Diedrichsen To Retire From UNL Nutrition Position

Miss Ethel Diedrichsen, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, officially retires from the NU staff Thursday. The Scribner native has been with the university 26 years.

Miss Diedrichsen received her B.S. and M.S. degrees from NU. She began her career in 1941 as a vocational home economics teacher at Chase County High School in Imperial.

Later, she served as a dietitian at veterans hospitals in Knoxville, Iowa, and Louisville, Ky. She joined the university staff in 1950 as an extension specialist.

In 1962, Miss Diedrichsen spent a year in Trinidad, West Indies, as a United Nations nutrition officer. Her work involved training local leaders in nutrition education methods and visual aid development.

In her last year with the university, Miss Diedrichsen researched and developed a slide-tape show on Nebraska heritage foods.

Cattlemen's Association Charges Consumer Index Is Misleading

Denver, Colo. — The American National Cattlemen's Association (ANCA) charged that the federal government's Consumer Price Index report is a misleading barometer of current food and beef prices.

Wray Finney, ANCA president, referred to the CPI report showing that retail beef prices in May were up 4% from a month earlier.

"What most people don't understand is that the CPI figures being widely reported actually are at least six weeks old," Finney said. "Instead of going up, beef prices actually have decreased recently. "Retail beef prices did rise from April to May, as shown in ANCA's own price survey. But since then, prices have declined," he added. "In fact, our price survey for June showed an average decrease of two cents per pound for five representative beef cuts in 19 cities.

"The CPI may be a useful tool for statisticians and bureaucrats, but a report that's a month and a half old is of no use to consumers interested in today's food prices."

Fairgrounds Site Of Heifer Show

The Nebraska State Fairgrounds will be the site of the first National Junior Charolais Heifer Show on Saturday, July 10.

The show is being held in conjunction with the annual Junior

State Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings says he hasn't made any firm decisions about his legislative or political future.

But he is willing to review his past and muse on how others may see him, both as a politician and long-time chairman of the Legislature's Appropriations Committee.

There were rumors during the last legislative session that a number of lawmakers thought it was time for Marvel to give up the Appropriations Committee. There was talk about approaching Marvel with an offer of support for the speakership of the 85th Legislature, thus taking him out of the appropriations panel.

"This is always a controversial post," Marvel said of the budget panel chairmanship. "It has always been a tough spot, and after all these years criticism doesn't bother me or threaten me at all. It's part of the job."

The Legislature often has been criticized by Gov. J. J. Exon for its spending policies. So some members of the Legislature blame Marvel for not being able to hold his colleagues in check when the budget is amended on the floor.

"Of course they do," Marvel said.

"But if you look at the record over the years, it has been good. We have lost some battles, but the majority of the committee recommendations have been upheld," Marvel said.

Marvel, 58, says he has not decided whether he will run for the chairmanship of the Appropriations Committee again, a job he has held since 1961. He also says that he has not decided whether to consider a bid for the speakership.

"No one has approached me about any kind of deal or vote trading," Marvel said in reference to the past rumors about making him speaker to open the budget committee slot. "It wouldn't do them any good. I don't operate that way and I

Marvel also acknowledges that some question whether he provides the Legislature with enough leadership on budget matters — and whether a "get tough" approach on his part would help the image of the Legislature in the public eye.

"That goes back to something people told me during my campaign for governor — that I should get tougher, be meaner," Marvel said. He carried the Republican banner against Exon in 1974.

"All I can say is that I'm me and I'm not going to create a manufactured front, and start ranting and hollering."

"I've gone through some pretty tough sessions and after all of it I still think that when you're sent down here you have to prove two things."

"First, your integrity. That is not out of style."

"The other is to prove that you can take the heat," Marvel said.

"I have tried to do both of those things."

Masonic Home To Get Omaha's Endowment

Omaha (AP) — Glenn W. McIninch, an Omaha businessman who died last July, has left about $5 million to the Nebraska Masonic Home at Plattsburgh.

The Omaha Home for Boys and Omaha Home for Girls each will receive about $1.6 million.

Bill Patterson, president of the Masonic Home, said: "We were terribly pleased to be remembered. We have received many endowments in the past, but this is certainly the largest from any individual or corporation."

The money goes into the home's endowment fund and only the interest, not the principal, will be spent. Patterson said this could be between $300,000 and $350,000 a year.

McIninch was a self-made millionaire. He grew up at Brownville and started out as a garage mechanic.

He rose to owner of the Auburn Machine Works Company, McIninch Investment Company, McIninch Motor Parts Company and Miller-Knuth Manufacturing Company.

Exon Pledges School Aid Statement

By United Press International
Gov. J. James Exon will announce Wednesday the findings of a study by his administration of the financial crunch facing Nebraska's public school districts.

Exon said during the weekend, he met last Friday with State Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue, chairman of the unicameral's Education Committee, and promised a statement at Wednesday's committee meeting.

Lewis said that if the governor would endorse efforts to have a $2.5-million special school aid appropriation made early in the 1977 regular session, efforts to force a special session this summer would be dropped.

Authority to distribute $2.5 million this summer was inadvertently left out of legislation adopted by the 1976 Nebraska Legislature. The attorney general's office has told Lewis' committee that only by legislative action can the error be corrected.

However, Lewis said school districts will borrow the money if they have some assurance a special appropriation will be made in January.

Exon said he has asked the State Administrative Services Department to determine whether school districts can get along until winter. He said he personally opposes a special legislative session.

Planners Will Consider Growth Policy

Omaha (AP) — The Planning Board will consider again Wednesday the controversial Omaha growth policy proposal.

The measure, which planners say is designed to curb urban sprawl and encourage building on available land within the city, has drawn criticism from home builders, the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce and the Omaha Industrial Foundation.

Planning Director Alden Aust, in defending the plan, said builders have questioned it, "but they have not countered with any specific information to change our minds about its soundness."

He said the plan is not as restrictive as opponents paint it, adding it provides incentives to develop property within the city and proposes penalties for planning subdivisions on land at the city's fringes.

State Employee Turnover Rate

5.4% In Quarter

A State Personnel Department report showed Sunday that turnover among state government employees in Nebraska was 5.42% during the first quarter of this year.

The turnover rate during the January-to-March quarter was higher than the 5.26% rate for the first quarter a year ago. The department's survey indicated a higher turnover among non-professional employees than among professional employees.

The survey, which covered 58 of 92 state agencies, showed a turnover rate this year of 6.82% among non-professional employees and a 2.99% turnover among professional employees.

Total resignations for the first quarter of 1976 was 4.14%, the report indicated.

Poll: Kissinger Keeps High Rating

By LOUIS HARRIS

Although he has become a target of intense political criticism in the contest for the Republican presidential nomination, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger continues to be highly regarded by the American people, with a 55-38% majority giving him a positive job rating. While Kissinger scored a higher rating, 63-31%, last September, his current standing is almost identical with the 57-37% positive marks he received back in May 1975.

By 52-24%, a majority is also opposed to President Ford removing Kissinger as secretary of state. Those who view themselves as conservatives oppose his removal by 48-28%.

Even Republican and independent voters backing Ronald Reagan for the White House are opposed to taking Kissinger off the job by a narrow 41-39%.

During the Texas Republican primary in May, some political analysts reported that Secretary Kissinger's trip to Africa, during which he announced a new U.S. policy favoring black rule where blacks are in a majority, had hurt President Ford. However, by 62-15%, a sizable majority of the American people supports such a U.S. African policy. Even in the deep South, a narrow 33-35% plurality backs it, as do Reagan supporters nationally by a 55-25% majority.

On another key point of criticism, a 47-33% plurality nationwide does not think Kissinger has been "too soft in his handling of relations with Russia." However, by 57-32% Reagan backers do concur with the charge, as do conservatives by a close 42-39%.

By and large, Kissinger receives favorable marks on most key dimensions of foreign policy:

— On "working for peace in the world," a 67-28% majority gives him a positive rating. This judgment has scarcely changed in the past year.

— On "handling relations with China," Kissinger is given 58-31% positive marks, slightly higher than for the previous 12 months.

— On "working to achieve a lasting peace in the Middle East," the secretary's rating is 55-37% positive, down from a high of 61-30% last September.

— On "handling relations with Western allies," he scores 49-36% positive, down slightly over the past six months.

There are some areas in which Kissinger receives negative marks from the public:

— On "handling relations with Congress," he is given a negative rating of 52-34%. This latest reading marks a slight improvement over the 59-32% negative standing he had on dealing with Congress last February, but it is still highly negative.

— On "getting the Russians to live up to agreements," a 50-35% majority is critical of Secretary Kissinger.

— On "negotiating an arms agreement with the Russians," he comes up with a 43-39% negative rating.

The Harris Survey recently asked a cross section of 1,481 adults nationwide: "Do you favor or oppose President Ford removing Henry Kissinger as secretary of State?"

Great America — A million years from now, when scientific blokes dig into the ruins, they will wonder what in the world we were pursuing in the pursuit of pleasure.

The other day we drove down to see Marriott's Great America, $80 million worth of — well, the press agent says it better:

"Marriott's Great America is a new concept in family entertainment, a $50 million park with entertaining live shows, spectacular rides, recreation of American history, quaint shops and tantalizing restaurants and all the fun on a pay-one-price admission.

"Marriott's Great America is at the pulse of western living, Santa Clara, California."

Actually, I was invited to the opening of the new Marriott Hotel. This makes the 47th hotel in the chain begun by J. Willard Marriott who started with a six-seat root beer stand in 1927.

I couldn't make the morning formal opening. I phoned for a report.

What with opening 46 previous hotels, I figured the public relations people would be hard pressed for a new spectacular. But P.R. men are paid to come up with tiger milk when called upon.

Somebody explained it to me on the phone: "We got this Hollywood stunt man, Hal Needham. Need I tell you he's the most famous stunt man in the business?"

"Everybody will be there, naturally. Mr. Marriott, the mayor of Santa Clara — all the brass that you can think of. We'll have a fact sheet up on it in a couple of hours.

"Now, up comes Needham! He's driving a rocket-powered pickup truck! Uses hydrogen peroxide burning engines. They develop 3,000 horsepower in one-and-a-half seconds! Never been used before off a movie set.

"He spins this rocket around the parking lot a few times.

"Now he gets out and up on a swaying pole, 60 feet in the air!"

He dives! As he falls, he breaks through the ceremonial ribbon! This releases a balsa wood key which floats skyward attached to a flock of helium balloons.

"It's a custom at each Marriott hotel opening to throw the key away. Like the door is always open. Welcome stranger!"

Ads For Young Discouraged

Los Angeles (AP) — The government is launching a drive to stop employment ads geared to attract recent college graduates because they discourage older workers from applying, says a federal labor administrator.

Ronald J. James, administrator of the Labor Department's wage and hour division, pointed to ads soliciting "recent graduates" and "junior executives" as evidence of discrimination against older workers.

In an interview here Saturday with the Los Angeles Times, James said employers are increasingly discriminating against senior citizens and new methods must be developed to cope with them.

He said the government is reviewing present rules which exempt apprenticeship programs from federal laws prohibiting discrimination against workers on the basis of age.

James declined to say how long the review would take, but other sources indicated they expect the government will soon require apprentice programs to admit all qualified workers, regardless of age. The Times said.

The federal government currently permits apprenticeship programs to ask only for young workers, but James said this could be changed by administrative action.

The Times noted that not all officials within the government are sympathetic to more stringent age enforcement because three times as many teen-agers as experienced workers are unemployed.

James said rapidly changing technology often require workers to switch careers several times throughout their lives, but that discriminatory age hiring practices can seriously hamper such changes.

The federal law against discrimination because of age is enforced by the wage and hour division, which also enforces the law against unequal pay for men and women performing the same jobs.

The law specifically bars discrimination because of age against anyone between ages 40 and 65.

The Times noted that not all officials within the government

Steamboat Museum Money Wins Nod

Washington (UPI) — The battle to preserve and display artifacts from the Civil War steamboat Bertrand appears to be nearing an end as the Senate Saturday voted to appropriate $225,000 for the project.

Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, has led efforts to save the 1865 Missouri River steamboat and display its cargo on the DeSoto National Wildlife Refuge near Missouri Valley. He said "it looks like the money is assured."

because both the House and Senate have approved similar appropriations.

A conference committee now must handle other differences in the measure. However, Culver said he sees very little problems with final passage of the bill.

The steamboat sank on April 1, 1865, when it hit a snag on its way up the Missouri River to replenish the Montana trading posts. The Bertrand remained buried under 20 feet of sand until 1968 when the hull was excavated by the National Park Service. The cargo, consisting of some 2 million separate items, was recovered on the grounds of the DeSoto refuge, which is operated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The two national services currently are vying for rights to the artifacts, as well as the Smithsonian Institute.

THE PADDOCK

By Mark Gordon
Star Sports Writer

Theory Still Valid

Omaha — Nothing is certain in horse racing, but one theory is becoming more and more valid at Ak-Sar-Ben:

You can not ship a top handicap horse here on Thursday, work the animal on Friday and expect to win a major race on Saturday.

That was proven again Saturday when Joachim, who has campaigned here the entire meeting, captured the $113,000 Omaha Gold Cup Stakes. He defeated Elmendorf's Play The Red, the Preakness Stakes runnerup, by 2½-lengths for Ak's featured attraction for 3-year-olds.

Play The Red arrived at Ak-Sar-Ben earlier in the week. He ran a fine race, but still lost. The other eastern invaders Balmak Stable's On The Sly and A. G. Labrot's Strawberry Landing were never in contention.

While Strawberry Landing was shipped here the week of the race, On The Sly, fifth in the Kentucky Derby had been here for more than 10 days. A morning workout mishap may have been partially responsible for his ninth-place finish in the Gold Cup.

Nevertheless, the only invader in recent years to capture a major Omaha race was the Timberland Stable's Stonewalk, who won last year's $107,000 Cornhusker Handicap.

Another Try

Stonewalk's connections were smarter than most — the 4-year-old colt was shipped here two weeks before the Cornhusker. By race time, he had several workouts over the track, was familiar with his surroundings and the track and was fully rested.

This year's Cornhusker will give Golden Chance Farms' Master Derby, a chance to redeem himself after finishing third as the 3-5 favorite in last year's Gold Cup. A year ago, he arrived on the Wednesday before the Saturday race.

He will arrive here Tuesday (one day earlier) in his quest for Saturday's $100,000-added Cornhusker. A year ago, he was a tired horse on the downgrade when he came here.

Master Derby had competed in the grueling Triple Crown races. He won the Preakness, but the long campaign obviously had taken its toll. He didn't win after that and finally trainer Smiley Adams gave him a well-deserved rest.

The Cornhusker, a mile and ½ fixture for 3-year-olds &amp; up, attracted 40 nominations. Unless Ancient Title comes, Master Derby again will be an odds-on choice.

He has won the $100,000-added Oaklawn Handicap at Oaklawn Park, the $100,000-added New Orleans Handicap and the $80,000-added Louisiana Handicap at the Fair Grounds.

Even his losses have been impressive. In his last start, he was beaten a head by two-time horse of the year Forego in the $110,000 Metropolitan Mile at Belmont and lost by a neck to Royal Glint in the $100,000-added Trenton Handicap at Garden State.

But can he defeat the Omaha invader jinx?

Hoofbeats — the heavy rains and winds which forced officials to cancel Saturday's ninth race may have prevented Ak-Sar-Ben from its second highest one-day mutual handle. Through eight races, $1,781,465 had been poured through the machines. Assuming Saturday's ninth race handled as much as the ninth race a week ago ($283,665), that would have made the mutual handle $2,065,030 — the third best one-day in history . . . But when the threatening skies indicated nasty weather was approaching, there was a steady stream of cars leaving Ak-Sar-Ben even before the Gold Cup was run. Who knows what the total may have been if the ninth race was run and the bad weather didn't scare so many patrons away . . . The crowd was well-behaved while awaiting word that the tornado warnings and tornado warning sirens had been canceled. Perhaps the busiest places during the storm were the bars and refreshment stands . . . Patrons were lined up many deep . . . After last year's May 6 tornado, officials made some changes in emergency precautions. Last year, there was no way to use the public address system after it had been turned off in the press box office. This year, a microphone was installed in executive director and general manager Dick Becker's grandstand office and officials used the microphone to warn patrons to stay inside and describe the quickest exits. Omaha promoter Don Romeo filled in most ably for regular announcer Bill Murphy from Becker's office. With coaching from Becker and his aides, Romeo sounded like a "real professional."

Geiberger Wins Western Open 'Unbelievably'

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — "It's hard for me to believe I won," Al Geiberger said Sunday after posting a four-over-par 288 to take the Western Open and the $40,000 top prize by one stroke.

Geiberger, playing with Bob Dickson, who blew a six-stroke lead in soaring to an 88 and a 280 total, said, "The big change came on the 14th hole when I got down in a birdie three with a 12-foot putt and Dickson took a double bogey after hitting the water."

"I passed Dickson at that time and then I thought, I had a chance to win," said Geiberger. "And then on the 18th when I put my tee shot in the rough I had to change my whole game plan. I had a shot to the green, but it was a very difficult one. I knew that Joe Porter had finished and had a chance to take it."

"But, I went over the green on my third shot and I said to myself, 'You're a big dummy, but I chipped back three feet to get my bogey and win.'"

Geiberger said that he could not recall a bogey on the final hole winning many tournaments. "But Arnold Palmer won at Tucson about seven years ago with a double bogey on the last hole."

"I wasn't rooting against Dickson. He's a friend, but it looked like I wanted him to win the way I played," Geiberger said.

Geiberger said this was the "fartherest back I've ever

Finley Lifts Oakland Trio's Ban

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland A's owner Charles Finley, facing pressure from both sides of his dispute with Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, begrudgingly lifted his ban of three players he thought he had sold and averted a strike by his team Sunday.

The action came minutes before the A's players were to have walked out in only the second known team strike in the history of baseball. Despite advice by the executive director of their players association, Marvin Miller, the players were set to leave when they learned Finley had permitted Joe Rudi to be started in left field against the Minnesota Twins.

Later, reliever Rollie Fingers entered the game, leaving lefthander Vida Blue as the only player of the three dealt in Finley's attempted $3.5 million clearance sale on June 15 who has not yet returned to the field.

Fans tangle with Milwaukee's Bernie Carbo Sunday as the Brewer unsuccessfully tries to catch a fly ball hit by New York Yankee Carlos May. An umpire ruled that the Yankee Stadium fans interfered with the rightfielder and May was called out.

Faced with the prospect of "grave consequences" from Kuhn should he not reinstate his athletes, and the possibility that the three players could become free agents through action taken by the players association, Finley said in a statement released here that he would follow Kuhn's order to use the men "in a normal fashion."

He maintained, however, that "at the same time, I strongly dispute and protest his decision that his actions are in the best interests of baseball. If having Fingers, Rudi and Blue play against the two teams that now own them is in the best interests of baseball—so be it."

"Since all members of the American League have agreed not to protest any of the games in which these players will appear, I have decided to acquiesce to Commissioner Kuhn's directive regarding the playing of the three players already sold by the Athletics," said the statement.

Blue had been sold to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million, while Fingers and Rudi had been purchased by the Boston Red Sox for $1.5 million each.

Kuhn voided the deal, then ordered Finley to use the three players. The owner refused.

On Friday, the A's players voted—without a dissenting vote—to strike if Manager Chuck Tanner did not use the disputed players. Prior to Finley's capitulation Sunday, the players again took a vote which reportedly came out 13-9 in favor of a walkout if the players were forced to continue on the bench.

In the dugout before the game, Fingers said, "I'm happy now that at least I'll get a chance to play." Fingers said he was "ready today. I can't say I've been overworked."

Blue said, "This is the way it had to come out.

I'm happy to be playing baseball again." It wasn't known, however, when he'd get his next start.

Rudi commented, "I'm not letting this bother me. I stayed in shape and worked out so I'd be ready when they finally made the decision."

Blue said, "This is the way it had to come out. I'm happy to be playing baseball again." It wasn't known, however, when he would get a start.

Jim Todd, the A's player representative, said the players association was in agreement that Finley should have been able to sell the ball players. The main objection from the A's players was that Oakland was going with a 22-man roster while the other three players were in limbo.

The Players Association also got involved, informing Finley that if he did not let the trio play, he would be violating their contracts and they could become free agents.

Fingers Records Ninth Save

By United Press International

Reliever Rollie Fingers, reinstated with two other teammates five minutes before the game by owner Charlie Finley to avert a players' strike, recorded his ninth save and Sal Bando hit a pair of homers Sunday to lead the Oakland A's to a 5-3 triumph over the Minnesota Twins.

Fingers, benched with Joe Rudi and Vida Blue by Finley after the sale of the trio was voided by commissioner Bowie Kuhn, entered the game with two outs in the sixth inning and the A's leading 4-3 with runners on second and third. After retiring Larry Hisle to end the threat, he gave up only two hits and three walks while striking out five the rest of the way.

Bando hit a two-run homer off loser Pete Redfern in the third inning and a solo shot in the eighth off reliever Bill Campbell. Gene Tenace knocked in the other two A's runs with a first-inning triple that was lost in the sun by center fielder Steve Brye. Rudi started in left field for Oakland and went hitless in four trips.

John Mayberry, who hit a solo homer in the seventh inning, looped a bases-loaded single to center in the 11th to score Jim Wohlford with the winning run before 37,960, fourth largest crowd in Royals' history.

Wohlford opened the 11th with a double off the glove of third baseman Ron Jackson and was able to move to third by eluding a rundown when shortstop Mario Guerrero's throw hit Wohlford in the back. After Dick Drago gave Amos Otis an intentional pass, Andy Hassler came in to pitch for California and, with none out, intentionally walked George Brett, whose two-run homer had tied the game in the ninth. Mayberry then singled to score Wohlford.

Mickey Rivers stroked three hits and scored three runs and Graig Nettles hit two homers and drove in five runs in the second game for a sweep of the doubleheader.

Rivers, extending his hitting streak to 20 games—longest by a Yankee since 1942—singled home a run during a two-run second inning and capped a three-run eighth with a sacrifice fly to spark the Yankees to a 6-2 triumph in the opener. On the Yankees' eight-game home stand Rivers hit .500 and collected 18 hits to raise his season average to .330.

The second game victory went to Dick Tidrow, 3-0, who made his first start since Sept. 20, 1974. In the first game Catfish Hunter won his ninth game and Sparky Lyle recorded his 13th save.

Bobby Grich doubled across one run and scored another and Andres Mora blasted his fifth home run as Baltimore salvaged a doubleheader split with Cleveland by winning the second game.

Left-hander Ross Grimsley, 2-4, notched the victory with relief help from Tippy Martinez in the nightcap despite Frank Robinson's 585th career home run.

Tom Veryzer and Danny Meyer knocked in 11th inning runs Sunday as Steve Grilli, the third Tiger pitcher, earned his second win in three decisions in pitching the final two innings.

In the National League Bob Boone's first major league grand slam capped a six-run, fourth inning that carried the Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals and gave Jim Lomberg his 10th win of the year.

The Phillies sent 10 batters to the plate during the outburst and scored six runs in an inning for the sixth time this season.

A single by Dave Cash, a walk to Mike Schmidt and Greg Luzinski's run-scoring single tied the game. Dick Allen's sacrifice fly gave the Phillies the lead and Jay Johnstone followed with a ground-rule double. Gary Maddox was hit with a pitch to load the bases and Boone capped the rally with his homer.

Mike Phillips and Ed Kranepool each hit home runs and drove in three runs apiece to lead the Mets to their rout of Chicago.

Phillips hit his third homer in as many days leading off the game and had a two-run single in an eight-run, second inning which gave the Mets a 9-0 bulge. Kranepool hit a two-run homer, his sixth, also in the second, and added a sacrifice fly in the third. The secondinning outburst tied a Met club record for most runs in an inning.

Tito Fuentes punched a single past third base with two out in the ninth inning to score Ted Kubiak from third and give the Padres their victory over Atlanta.

Left-hander Fred Norman allowed only four hits in seven innings and Cesar Geronimo had three singles to pace the Reds past Houston. Norman raised his record to 6-1 with the victory.

Elifie Rodriguez and Manny Mota drove in runs in the fifth inning to break a 6-6 tie and lead the Dodgers over San Francisco.

Singles by Rodriguez and Mota, who had his 100th career pinch hit, followed one-out singles by Ed Goodson and Bill Russell and tagged winless Mike Caldwell, the Giants' third pitcher, with his fifth loss.

Bobby Murcer hit two home runs to pace the Giants' offensive attack.

Tim Foli drove in three runs with a double and a single and Woody Fryman worked 6 2-3 innings to gain his 100th career victory, leading Montreal over the Pirates.

Al Unser Streaks To Schaefer Victory

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Al Unser, his sleek blue and white Cosworth-powered Parnelli clearly the fastest on the track, made up nearly two laps lost because of a long pit stop and a shredded tire, then roared on to decisive victory in Sunday's $40,000 Schaefer 500.

An apparent record crowd of about 120,000 watched Unser's relentless charge in the sixth annual edition of the Indianapolis car Triple Crown race, the first 500-miler in the series to be run without rain interference since 1974. The victory, Unser's 29th in Indy cars since 1965, was worth an estimated $80,000.

Second place went to Mike Mosley in an Eagle, less than three seconds back, followed by Wally Dallenbach, Johnny Rutherford and Mario Andretti. All were on the same lap around the 2½-mile Pocono International Raceway trioval except Andretti who ran out of fuel on the lap circuit.

Unser unlappped himself finally at the 300-mile mark, then overhauled Andretti for the lead. Except for pit stops, the 36-year-old Unser managed to keep ahead of the closely bunched field the rest of the distance.

Unser was in command early in the race until a damaging 31.5 second pit stop that put him nearly a full lap down. The problem was a malfunction in a new on-board jack system.

Unser, who hadn't won on the circuit since 1974, was working to make up the lost ground when a tire shredded into huge chunks as he was attempting to pass Janet Guthrie on the main straightaway.

Miss Guthrie's historic debut in a 500-mile U.S. Auto Club championship race turned into a flop. She completed 89 laps, after having made nine pit stops, and was almost dead last on the track. Her balky Vollstedt was beset by a number of troubles, including fuel leaks, overheating woes, and finally a broken gearbox.

"I couldn't get the transmission to stay in fourth gear," Miss Guthrie said of the problem that finally did her in.

Andretti sped in front on the start, but A.J. Foyt took over at lap seven and stayed in front until his car started to go sour at lap 18. Unser moved ahead then, and led all but two laps until the 58th circuit, when his troubles began.

Until Unser erased his disadvantage, the lead was mostly a battle between Mosley and Andretti. Unser was able to get in front of the leaders after both of his difficulties, then speed around and make up nearly the entire 2½-mile lap when the pace car came on the track during caution periods.

Eldon Rasmussen crashed in the first turn on the very first lap. He spun and grazed the wall, and the damage was minor enough that he was later able to resume racing.

By the time Unser was out of the race after only 26 laps when his Cobra's engine ran out of fuel and burned a piston.

Jensen Gains Second Eagle Feature Win

'I saw that he would have had a hole to shoot through and I just moved down on the track to shut him off.'

'That's defensive driving and you have to do it to win.'

— Lonnie Jensen

By KEN HAMBLETON

Eagle — Lonnie Jensen hasn't had to pass a car in two weeks at Eagle Raceway and for the second straight week nobody got past Jensen.

Jensen started on the pole for the second week in a row and took full advantage of the start and led the 25-lap race throughout for his second straight sprint car feature win.

After six restarts of the first lap because of spins and accidents, Jensen moved away from the field and threatened to walk away with the win.

But Dick Sutcliffe, who is second in the point standings behind Don Maxwell, found a gap and moved from sixth to second on the third lap and began closing Jensen.

Sutcliffe pulled even with Jensen on the eighth lap but the leader quickly changed his groove on the track and shot the challenger.

"That's defensive driving and you have to do it to win," said Jensen of Lincoln. "I saw that he would have had a hole to shoot through and I just moved down on the track to shut him off."

Sutcliffe mounted another serious challenge with two laps to go and appeared to be moving into position on the second turn. But just as the Greenwood, Mo., driver got ready to pass, Jensen zipped around a slower car and Sutcliffe had to slow down to avoid a collision.

"I won't hit anybody on purpose just to get by them," said Sutcliffe. "I might have been able to nudge him and take the lead but I don't want to win that way."

Jensen knows this track very well and he knows where the grooves are," said Sutcliffe, who turned in the fastest time in the trials. "He's very hard to catch but almost impossible to pass."

"I think I showed Jensen my nose (front of the car) too soon and he changed his pattern to block me off," Sutcliffe said. "But that's racing and I have a lot of respect for him as a driver. When he's in front, it's his track."

The six restarts were caused by cars spinning in the first and second turns each time. On one of the accidents that caused the restart, Don Maxwell, Sutcliffe, Mike Brooks and Dunkle were all involved but none of the

Theory Still Valid

Omaha — Nothing is certain in horse racing, but one theory is becoming more and more valid at Ak-Sar-Ben:

You can not ship a top handicap horse here on Thursday, work the animal on Friday and expect to win a major race on Saturday.

That was proven again Saturday when Joachim, who has campaigned here the entire meeting, captured the $113,000 Omaha Gold Cup Stakes. He defeated Elmendorf's Play The Red, the Preakness Stakes runnerup, by 2 1/2-lengths for Ak's featured attraction for 3-year-olds.

Play The Red arrived at Ak-Sar-Ben earlier in the week. He ran a fine race, but still lost. The other eastern invaders Balmak Stable's On The Sly and A. G. Labrot's Strawberry Landing were never in contention.

While Strawberry Landing was shipped here the week of the race, On The Sly, fifth in the Kentucky Derby had been here for more than 10 days. A morning workout mishap may have been partially responsible for his ninth-place finish in the Gold Cup.

Nevertheless, the only invader in recent years to capture a major Omaha race was the Timberland Stable's Stonewalk, who won last year's $107,800 Cornhusker Handicap.

Another Try

Stonewalk's connections were smarter than most — the 4-year-old colt was shipped here two weeks before the Cornhusker. By race time, he had several workouts over the track, was familiar with his surroundings and the track and was fully rested.

This year's Cornhusker will give Golden Chance Farms' Master Derby, a chance to redeem himself after finishing third as the 3-5 favorite in last year's Gold Cup. A year ago, he arrived on the Wednesday before the Saturday race.

He will arrive here Tuesday (one day earlier) in his quest for Saturday's $100,000-added Cornhusker. A year ago, he was a tired horse on the downgrade when he came here.

Master Derby had competed in the grueling Triple Crown races. He won the Preakness, but the long campaign obviously had taken its toll. He didn't win after that and finally trainer Smiley Adams gave him a well-deserved rest.

The Cornhusker, a mile and 1/8th fixture for 3-year-olds & up, attracted 40 nominations. Unless Ancient Title comes, Master Derby again will be an odds-on choice.

He has won the $100,000-added Oaklawn Handicap at Oaklawn Park, the $100,000-added New Orleans Handicap and the $30,000-added Louisiana Handicap at the Fair Grounds.

Even his losses have been impressive. In his last start, he was beaten a head by two-time horse of the year Forego in the $110,000 Metropolitan Mile at Belmont and lost by a neck to Royal Glint in the $100,000-added Trenton Handicap at Garden State.

But can he defeat the Omaha invader jinx?

Hoofbeats — the heavy rains and winds which forced officials to cancel Saturday's ninth race may have prevented Ak-Sar-Ben from its second highest one-day mutuel handle. Through eight races, $1,781,465 had been poured through the machines. Assuming Saturday's ninth race handled as much as the ninth race a week ago (Saturday ($283,565), that would have made the mutuel handle $2,065,030 — the third best one-day in history . . . But when the threatening skies indicated nasty weather was approaching, there was a steady stream of cars leaving Ak-Sar-Ben even before the Gold Cup was run. Who knows what the total may have been if the ninth race was run and the bad weather didn't scare so many patrons away . . . The crowd was well-behaved while awaiting word that the tornado warnings and tornado warning sirens had been canceled. Perhaps the busiest places during the storm were the bars and refreshment stands . . . Patrons were lined up many deep . . . After last year's May 6 tornado, officials made some changes in emergency precautions. Last year, there was no way to use the public address system after it had been turned off in the press box office. This year, a microphone was installed in executive director and general manager Dick Becker's grandstand office and officials used the microphone to warn patrons to stay inside and describe the quickest exits. Omaha promoter Don Romeo filled in most ably for regular announcer Bill Murphy from Becker's office. With coaching from Becker and his aides, Romeo sounded like a "real professional."

Geiberger Wins Western Open 'Unbelievably'

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — "It's hard for me to believe I won," Al Geiberger said Sunday after posting a four-over-par 288 to take the Western Open and the $40,000 top prize by one stroke.

Geiberger, playing with Bob Dickson, who blew a six-stroke lead in soaring to an 80 and a 290 total, said, "The big change came on the 14th hole when I got down in a birdie three with a 13-foot putt and Dickson took a double bogey after hitting the water."

"I passed Dickson at that time and then I thought I had a chance to win," said Geiberger. "And then on the 18th when I put my tee shot in the rough I had to change my whole game plan. I had a shot to the green, but it was a very difficult one. I knew that Joe Porter had finished and had a chance to take it."

"But, I went over the green on my third shot and I said to myself, 'You're a big dummy,' but I chipped back three feet to get my bogey and win."

Geiberger said that he could not recall a bogey on the final hole winning many tournaments. "But Arnold Palmer won at Tucson about seven years ago with a double bogey on the last hole."

"I wasn't rooting against Dickson. He's a friend, but it looked like I wanted him to win the way I played," Geiberger said.

Geiberger said this was the "farthest back I've ever come to win a tournament. Everyone says I look cool and collected out there, but everybody gets nervous and I know I do."

Dickson, winless since 1973, started with a 12-foot birdie putt to open his six-stroke lead. But, then he started falling apart.

"After a birdie on the first hole I felt I had a good chance, but the old pressure got to me," he said. "I thought I was handling the pressure pretty well until the 12th hole when I three-putted, missing a real short one and it shook me up. Never before had I led a tournament for three rounds and I thought the way things were going, just a mediocre round today would have won it. But an 80 caught up with me again."

By the 13th hole, Porter had moved into a tie with Dickson, but on the 17th he went from the rough into the water for a bogey, and on the 18th he was in the trees, sculled a shot out of a trap over the green and took a double bogey finish for a 73 and 289.

Meanwhile, 38-year-old Geiberger, who tied for second in the U.S. Open a week ago, birdied the 14th with a 15-footer and made par the next three holes as he grabbed the lead. On the 17th, he salvaged a par after coming out of a trap six feet from the hole.

The victory was worth $40,000 to Geiberger, winner of the Greater Greensboro Open this year.

Geiberger said this was the "farthest back I've ever

Italy's Riccardo Patrese drove his Toyota to victory in the Monza Grand Prix for Formula 3 cars, making the owner of a lucky lottery ticket $240,000 richer. The race was tied to the Italian national lottery.

The German pair of Jochen Mass and Rolf Stommelen won the 16th F1000 Auto Racing Cup in a Porsche 938. The race is the fourth event counting towards the world sports car championship.

American racing driver Bill Dubelmann was seriously injured while competing in the Shellport European 5,000 championship in England. His car crashed into the wall after being struck by another car. Dubelmann was trapped in the car for 15 minutes.

Drag racer Marshall Wuerly was pronounced dead at a hospital in Pevely, Mo., shortly after his stock car veered out of control during a time trial and rolled at the end of a strip. The cause of the accident was not immediately determined, but a Missouri International Raceway spokesman said the car was approaching a speed of 100 m.p.h.

Olympics

Klaus DiBiasi of Italy, preparing for the Montreal Olympics, swept the 10-meter platform diving event in an international meet. The two-time Olympic gold medalist rolled up 634.41 points, a total Italian officials said constituted a world record.

Arab and African nations threatened to boycott the Summer Olympics in Montreal if New Zealand is allowed to compete. The threat came after New Zealand sent a rugby football team to South Africa despite vehement protests from African nations.

Prince Phillip, president of the International Equestrian Federation, told the London Times there was widespread doping in equestrian sports and that he had even taken a drug usually given to horses to help him prolong his polo-playing career. Phillip said horses would be tested for drugs at the Montreal Olympics for the first time in an effort to stamp out their use in equestrian events.

Rhonda Brady, 16, became the youngest member of the 1976 American Olympic track and field team when she won the 100-meter hurdles in a windaided :13.25. The other two on the team will be Debby Lap Lante and Pat Donnelly.

Other Sports

The Baltimore Orioles purchased the contract of veteran first baseman-outfielder Terry Crowley from Rochester and assigned outfielder Royle Stillman to the International League Club.

The United States was seeded No. 1 at the draw for the 1976 Federation Cup — the women's national team tennis championship — to be played in Philadelphia Aug. 22-29.

Return of a Native, the longest shot in the field at 90 to 1, came from well back in the pack to win the 42nd running of the $125,000 Ohio Derby at Thistledown. Second place finisher Cokaj went off at 5 to 1 and led for most of the mile and 1/4th race. Dream and Be Lucky finished third.

All-time home run king Henry Aaron said he doesn't "know what the deal is" concerning reports he will leave the Milwaukee Brewers and return to the Atlanta Braves next season as vice president for player development and public relations. Aaron refused to comment as to whether he will leave the Brewers.

Tom D'Eath, driving Miss U.S., battled Bill Muncey and his Atlas Van Lines boat and won an accident-marred Gold Cup hydroplane race on the Detroit River before 500,000 fans. Miss Budweiser flipped on the first turn and driver Howie Bensu suffered a broken leg. Olympia Beer, which led all qualifiers earlier in the week, had a similar accident but driver Bill Schumacher was uninjured.

Judds Sweeps Doubleheader

Kearney — Judds swept a doubleheader from the Kearney American Legion team, 9-5 and 11-3, collecting 30 hits in the twinbill.

Bruce Reed had six hits and eight RBIs in the doubleheader, including a triple and two doubles. Tom Sveha had four hits, including a triple, a double and two singles, and four RBIs. In the second game, Judds pitcher Scott Davis hit a three-run double.

6 U.S. Boxers To Square Off

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — Six U.S. boxing team members will fight again to determine who will represent the country at next month's Olympics in Montreal.

The six will pair off in three bouts to be held before the team breaks camp July 10 at its temporary training facility at the University of Vermont. No date has been set for the matches.

Eight other boxers earned the right to represent the U.S. in bouts before a capacity crowd of 4,000 at UVM's Patrick Gymnasium Saturday.

Winners of matches earlier this month in Cincinnati had only to win in Burlington to automatically qualify for the U.S. squad. Usually the winner of the first round of matches also takes the second bout, but Saturday's fights left undecided who will represent the U.S. in the heavyweight, middleweight and welterweight classes.

Big John Tate, a 224-pound truck driver from Knoxville, Tenn., lost a unanimous decision to 193-pound Marvin Stinson of Philadelphia in the heavyweight battle.

A cut mouth sustained by defender Clinton Jackson of Evergreen, Ala., forced postponement of his second match with welterweight challenger Roosevelt Green.

— Judy Rankin fired a sizzling 69 for the second day in a row for a three-stroke lead over JoAnne Carner after Sunday's third round of the $100,000 Babe Zaharias Invitational women's golf tournament.

Mrs. Rankin, the leading money winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, carded three birdies in the middle of her round, largely on the strength of accurate approach shots, and had a 212 after 54 holes.

Mrs. Carner, who held a three-stroke advantage going into the third round, shot her worst round of the tournament with a three-over-par 75. She was tied for second place with resurgent Jane Blalock at 215.

Miss Blalock, who shot a 69, has done progressively better in each round, posting scores of 74 and 72 before Sunday, on the rolling 6,200-yard Tanglewood Country Club course outside of Cleveland. The final round will be Monday. It was delayed one day by rain Thursday, forcing postponement of the opening round.

Mrs. Rankin said she felt tired because of the heat. The temperatures hit a high of 87.

"It was really the hottest weather I've hit in all year. My endurance is not as good in the heat. But all I need to do is recharge overnight."

Connors Leads U.S. Quartet

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — On sun-burnished courts like ice rinks, Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., led a quartet of Americans into the quarter-finals of the men's singles here, leaving champion Arthur Ashe despondent and beaten on the sidelines.

Joining Connors, seeded second behind Ashe, in the quarter-finals were Charles Pasarell, of Puerto Rico, Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., and Vitas Gerulaitis, from Howard Beach, N.Y. Tanner is seeded seventh while the other two both are giant killers.

With them in the quarter-finals are Ilie Nastase of Romania, seeded third, Bjorn Borg of Sweden, seeded fourth, Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, seeded sixth, and Raul Ramirez of Mexico, ranked eighth.

The fourth round belonged to Gerulaitis, an ebullient youngster who beat Ashe Saturday, 4-6, 8-9, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 in a grueling duel that lasted nearly three hours in the sun on an outside court. It was the first time Gerulaitis had beaten the Miami star in four matches—and the first time in three starts he had ever got beyond the first round at Wimbledon.

Connors—a self-confessed re-formed character after losing his title to Ashe last year—destroyed Stan Smith in a center court battle of ex-champions. Smith had won the title in 1972, but Saturday he was no match for Connors, who won 6-4, 6-1, 6-3.

All together, in the four rounds he has played so far this year, Connors has dropped only 29 games.

Almost as impressive on his way to the quarter-finals has been Nastase. Saturday he had some initial trouble in breaking down Onny Parun of New Zealand, but after getting the first set 7-5, he produced forceful and accurate tennis to take the next two 6-4, 6-3.

Tanner relies on his service to pound his opponents into submission. It wasn't working too well Saturday, but Tanner was still too good for Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia and won 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

The two top seeds—Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Evonne Goolagong of Australia, both won easily—as they have all week. Miss Evert beat Betty Stove of the Netherlands, 6-2, 6-2, while Miss Goolagong downed fellow Australian Dianne Fromholz, 6-3, 6-4.

Miss Evert meets Olga Morozova of Russia in the quarter-finals while Miss Goolagong meets Rosie Casals of San Francisco. The other quarter-finals will be between Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia and Sue Barker of Britain, and Karen Reid of Australia against Virginia Wade of Britain.

Charlie Pasarell, from Puerto Rico, seems to believe in living dangerously. He pulled back from a two-set deficit against Adriano Panatta of Italy in the third round to come out the winner. Then he did the same Saturday against Phil Dent of Australia, dropping the first two sets 6-4, 6-0, 7-5.

Apart from Ashe and Smith, the other American to drop out Saturday was Brian Gottfried, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He was beaten in straight sets by Bjorn Borg, the young Swede who had been taking things quietly before Wimbledon this year. Borg was troubled by a strained groin but still won easily, 6-2, 6-2, 7-5.

The quarter-finals of the men's singles will be held Tuesday, the semifinals on Thursday and the final Saturday. The women will play their quarter-finals Monday, their semifinals Wednesday and their final Friday.

In the quarter-finals, Gerulaitis will play Raul Ramirez, of Mexico, who downed Bernie Mitton of South Africa, 9-8, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1; Nastase plays Pasarell; Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, who beat the lone Australian seed Tony Roche, plays Borg, and Tanner plays Connors.

The women, who shocked Wimbledon by refusing to play here next year unless their prize money equals the men's, got through to the quarter-finals according to plan and with no surprises.

All together, in the four rounds he has played so far this year, Connors has dropped only 29 games.

Almost as impressive on his way to the quarter-finals has been Nastase. Saturday he had some initial trouble in breaking down Onny Parun of New Zealand, but after getting the first set 7-5, he produced forceful and accurate tennis to take the next two 6-4, 6-3.

Tanner relies on his service to pound his opponents into submission. It wasn't working too well Saturday, but Tanner was still too good for Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia and won 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

The two top seeds—Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Evonne Goolagong of Australia, both won easily—as they have all week.

Miss Evert beat Betty Stove of the Netherlands, 6-2, 6-2, while Miss Goolagong downed fellow Australian Dianne Fromholz, 6-3, 6-4.

Miss Evert meets Olga Morozova of Russia in the quarter-finals while Miss Goolagong meets Rosie Casals of San Francisco. The other quarter-finals will be between Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia and Sue Barker of Britain, and Karen Reid of Australia against Virginia Wade of Britain.

The women will play their quarter-finals Monday, their semifinals Wednesday and their final Friday.

In the quarter-finals, Gerulaitis will play Raul Ramirez, of Mexico, who downed Bernie Mitton of South Africa, 9-8, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1; Nastase plays Pasarell; Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, who beat the lone Australian seed Tony Roche, plays Borg, and Tanner plays Connors.

The women, who shocked Wimbledon by refusing to play here next year unless their prize money equals the men's, got through to the quarter-finals according to plan and with no surprises.

President One Of Five Who Have Quit System

By REGINA J. HILLS
United Press International

D. B. Varner, who unexpectedly announced his resignation as president of the University of Nebraska after nearly seven years on the job, is the fifth top university administrator to leave in slightly more than a year.

Despite the turnovers, Varner said in an interview, he thinks the administrative-level changes will subside.

Following a closed-door, executive session, Varner Saturday announced his decision to resign, effective no later than Jan. 1, 1977, at the Board of Regents' meeting in Lincoln.

He said he will join the staff of the University of Nebraska Foundation as chairman of the board of directors and chief executive officer. The exact date for assuming his new role will depend on the choice of a successor to Varner, but not later than Jan. 1.

He said he was not resigning because of discontent, but rather "from the conclusion that I've likely made my best contribution to the university."

Occasional 'Element Of Abuse'

During an interview after the board meeting, Varner said being an administrator is exciting, but at times administrators suffer an "element of abuse once in a while."

Such positions, he said, are physically and emotionally demanding and turnover is "healthy."

He said he made his decision to resign "in the last few weeks — with my family." He said he was not leaving for personal or health reasons.

"I have come to the conclusion that the tenure for the chief executive of a university system is, of necessity, of shorter duration than many university positions," he said.

"It's time; we have it in place and it's working," Varner said of the university system."

Would Have Ranking

In January 1977, Varner would have served the university seven years — making him the second-ranking U.S. university system president in tenure.

University officials, state legislators, faculty members, the regents and Varner have in the past year said they hoped the rapid turnover in administrators would not affect the quality of education at the university.

Varner said the turnovers have not hurt the university, and one of his considerations in resigning at present is that the University is "in good shape."

The plane was hijacked Sunday on a flight from Tel Aviv to Paris and had made a stopover in Athens when it was com-mandered.

Among the passengers were at least nine Americans and about 30 Israelis.

Shortly after 3 p.m. CDT the plane left Benghazi and landed at Eustis at 3:35 p.m. CDT. A full load of fuel would last only six hours, Air France officials said.

One ailing passenger, believed to be a British woman, was freed in Benghazi, Libya, while French and Syrian officials

But Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln said he was "shocked" at Varner's announcement and felt it "unfortunate" Varner chose to resign at a time of "high turnover in the university's administrative ranks."

Before Varner's tenure as president ends, the university will lose Medical Center Chancellor Robert Sparks and Larry Braskamp, assistant to the Lincoln campus chancellor.

Others Have Resigned

They were preceded in the past year by the resignation of former Lincoln Chancellor James Zumberge and Duane Acher, Lincoln campus chancellor for the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Gov. J. James Exon said he learned of Varner's resignation Friday. "I was very surprised to learn of his decision," Exon said, and was disappointed to see Varner step down.

William Erskine, executive vice president for administration, said when he came to the university 2½ years ago from Colorado, Varner was one of the things that attracted him to the Lincoln campus.

"It's a disappointment he's leaving," Erskine said. "He was a great portion of my inducement to come here. The state of Nebraska is losing almost a perfect man from the university — he fits like a glove."

Foundation Made Efforts

Erskine said few knew about Varner's plans until Friday.

Flavel Wright, chairman of the NU Foundation's board, said when it was learned that Varner had decided to resign and was considering alternative positions outside the state, every effort was made to persuade him to join the NU Foundation and "provide leadership for a major fund drive now being considered."

Varner said he was submitting his resignation "under the most positive circumstances. It is not a matter of personal health, it is not a matter of pressure from any source, it is not a result of disappointment nor frustration.

"It is simply that I believe it is time to make this move," he said, "and I do so with gratitude to the regents and the university community for these extremely pleasant years and with enthusiasm for a new opportunity to serve a university and the state."

A 16-member search committee will be called to look for Varner's successor. The committee is to return with the names of five to seven candidates by Oct. 1.

Air France Jet Hijacked To Uganda

By The Associated Press

Hijackers seized an Air France jetliner with 256 persons aboard, forced it to refuel in Libya, and then, fly deep into Africa and land at Entebbe, Uganda, airline officials reported early Monday.

Air France sources said the plane had only enough fuel to last 30 minutes when it was granted permission to land.

Entebbe is on the shores of Lake Victoria, 19 miles northeast of the Ugandan capital of Kampala.

The plane was hijacked Sunday on a flight from Tel Aviv to Paris and had made a stopover in Athens when it was com-

President One Of Five Who Have Quit System

By REGINA J. HILLS

United Press International

D. B. Varner, who unexpectedly announced his resignation as president of the University of Nebraska after nearly seven years on the job, is the fifth top university administrator to leave in slightly more than a year.

Despite the turnovers, Varner said in an interview he thinks the administrative-level changes will subside.

Following a closed-door, executive session, Varner Saturday announced his decision to resign, effective no later than Jan. 1, 1977, at the Board of Regents' meeting in Lincoln.

He said he will join the staff of the University of Nebraska Foundation as chairman of the board of directors and chief executive officer. The exact date for assuming his new role will depend on the choice of a successor to Varner, but not later than Jan. 1.

He said he was not resigning because of discontent, but rather "from the conclusion that I've likely made my best contribution to the university."

Occasional 'Element Of Abuse'

During an interview after the board meeting, Varner said being an administrator is exciting, but at times administrators suffer an "element of abuse once in a while."

Such positions, he said, are physically and emotionally demanding and turnover is "healthy."

He said he made his decision to resign "in the last few weeks — with my family." He said he was not leaving for personal or health reasons.

"I have come to the conclusion that the tenure for the chief executive of a university system is, of necessity, of shorted duration than many university positions," he said.

"It's time; we have it in place and it's working," Varner said of the university system.

Would Have Ranking

In January 1977, Varner would have served the university seven years — making him the second-ranking U.S. university system president in tenure.

University officials, state legislators, faculty members, the regents and Varner have in the past year said they hoped the rapid turnover in administrators would not affect the quality of education at the university.

Varner said the turnovers have not hurt the university, and one of his considerations in resigning at present is that the University is "in good shape."
